The Invisible Grip -that means safety

You are probably not aware that your Builder and Electrician have used Rawlplugs for hundreds of fixing jobs in your own home. That is because a Rawlplug is invisible once it is fixed. It grips the wall like a vice, holding the fixture firmly and permanently in position—yet it is invisible.

Sold in complete outfits by all Ironmongers and Stores at 1/6, 3/6 and 5/6. Illustrated Literature free on request.

You also will find a hundred-and-one Rawlplug jobs in your home which you can do yourself. Anyone can use Rawlplugs successfully without previous experience.

To Our Readers

TO OUR READERS we would like to say a few words in presenting to your notice a new idea carried out in a new manner. THE WEEKLY KINEMA GUIDE, of which you are now reading the first copy, is the result of much careful thought and, as no doubt you will appreciate, in the last few days a great deal of work.

The compiling of an up-to-date list of the London and Suburban Cinemas is, in itself, by no means an easy matter, but to "get in" all their weekly and bi-weekly programmes is a considerable undertaking.

We have done our best! There may be mistakes or omissions and we shall be glad to have them pointed out.

In turning over the pages that follow you will see that we have had in mind three definite ideas.

Firstly, to tell you what each and every Kinema has to offer you.

Secondly, to give you a list of the more important Films and the districts in which they are to be found and

Thirdly, the names of some of your favourite Stars together with the Films in which they are to be seen and heard.

TO THE CINEMA MANAGEMENTS we would offer our thanks for the co-operation that we have had from you and for your future assistance.

It is only with your help that we can hope to arrive at complete success and if towards "press days" we sometimes worry you for "last minute" information we take this opportunity to offer our apologies.

We have tried to leave out not a single Cinema Theatre but if, in this, we have failed we shall be glad to rectify the error in our future issues.

In conclusion we would add that our idea has been, and is, to give to the film going public a "KINEMA A.B.C."

We shall be most grateful to any reader who may send us a suggestion or a "grouse" and, if we can, we will do our best to adopt it if it be the former or to satisfy it if it be, unhappily, the latter.

EDDIE CANTOR STARTS A DISCUSSION

LONDON critics, confronted with that brilliant American comedian, Eddie Cantor, have been at some pains to place him. "The Evening News" describes him as "possessing the snappy wit of Leslie Henson, the mobility of Lupino Lane, and the whimsicality of Charlie Chaplin." The truth that Eddie Cantor is Eddie—himself—inveterate 'gagster' and wit. Most of the funny stuff he gives in "Whoopee," now packing The Tivoli is Cantor-brand humour. But for the word "Whoopee," he claims no patent. It it said to be American for "a riotous time." But English scholars know better. "Whoopee" is distinctly Old English, just as a good many alleged Americanisms are. The Cheapside appentices of Shakespearean days shouted "Whoopee" when they went out to wake up the echoes in London city. The Cornish cattleman shouted "Whoopee" to his recalcitrant cows, and the Elizabethan dramatist employed the word. In "The Virgin Martyr," the hero says, "Nay, lady, for my part, I'll cry 'Whoopee'." When the English adventurer became cowboy in "them that States," he took "W-h-o-o-p-y" with him. So the Americans annexed the English word. At least it sounds better than describing a riotous time by our slang word "binge" or "beanfeast."

LILIAN DAVIES

Starring in

"Just For A Song"

This is Miss Davies' first appearance in pictures, and the spirited playing and singing of this well-known musical comedy star will assure her a hearty welcome.

The parts of Jack and Jill are delightfully interpreted by the established stage favourites, Roy Royston and and Constance Carpenter, that of the philandering booking manager is played by Cyril Ritchard (who will be remembered in "Blackmail," "Piccadilly," and as a musical comedy artist).

Lastly, variety finds a representative of country-wide renown, in Dick Henderson, whose singing is one of the tit-bits of the show.

JUST FOR A SONG

A BRITISH picture, "Just For a Song," featuring Lilian Davies, should please, even if only for the fact that it is tuneful.

The film, which is to be seen at many Theatres this week, is another "Back Stage" story, but with a difference. It is from the point of view of English producers, and should be all the more attractive, for that reason, to the British Cinema goer.

Jack and Jill (Lilian Davies and Roy Royston) are characters that are well known to most of us, and Nick Adams gives a good interpretation of another "old friend," the Jewish manager.

On the whole this can be looked upon as a good film and will give pleasure to those who like light entertainment.

Jack HOLT in Vengeance

TWO MEN LOVED ONE WOMAN ● ● GREAT STORY OF TROPICAL LIFE

"Vengeance" is the story of two men and a woman in a trading station in the Congo, hundreds of miles from civilisation. To this heat-soaked place Charles Summers (Philip Strange) brings his wife (Dorothy Revier), defying convention and common sense. He resents the well-meant advice of John Meadham (Jack Holt) and a decided antagonism develops between them. It is not a picture that depends upon story, rather upon action, human interest, clever character portrayal, and a big sense of suspense, which holds the narrative together in a close and unrelaxing grip of interest.

The fever-stricken desolation of the Congo, the native menace, the gradual degeneration of the husband, the dawning disillusion of the hysterical wife, and, above all, the manly sympathy of the suspected Meadham. All these are very real things, rounded off by the pageantry of the native rising, with hordes of demented savages leaping about in the light of their torches, will exercise a deep appeal.

The screen has often taken the picture-goer to West Africa with its demoralising heat and damp but seldom has real drama been more convincingly presented in that setting.

THE MAN WHO MADE HELL'S ANGELS

HE might have been a college student, this hatless youth who dropped in to see the premiere of his film at its New York opening. London Pavilion patrons would not have recognised him as the young millionaire who had taken four years to make "Hell's Angels." His suit of light brown plaid, could have stood pressing, and his unseemed features needed a barber's attention. And he paid for his seat in the cheaper portion of the theatre. Young Hughes wanted to see for himself as an unknown, how actually the audience would receive his picture. The rest is history. Several years before, a Texas lad in his teens, he came to Hollywood to learn about motion pictures. He took up lodgings in a quiet part of the city, anl just looked on for over a year. Finally, Ralph Graves. who wanted to write, act in and direct a picture, persuaded Mr. Hughes to join him. They made a silent film about a girl deserted—about to commit suicide—baby adopted and the rest. Hughes looked it over, decided the cost was worth the experience—then shelved it. Developing a high brow's acquaintance, Howard Hughes got financially interested in a comedy, "Eevrybody's Acting," which was played in the Paramount theatre and did quite well, thank you. Followed "Two Arabian Knights," directed by Lewis Milestone, which was a big comedy success. That will explain why Howard Hughes is linking up now with Lewis Milestone, director of "All Quiet," for another production. His first big trouble came with his adaptation of the stage play, "The Racket." A scathing expose of corrupt politics hand in hand with graft-paying Crime in the prohibition era, it came at a time when the wet and dry issue was paramount, just before the Presidential election. In one city after another, the censors tried to mutilate it. Hughes broke movie traditions. He didn't salaam to the censors. He fought them. And his picture, unmarred, was finally shown in every city where it had been opposed, in most instances after he had threatened court action. The youthful Hughes is more than the angel of "Hell's Angels." He was with the picture during every minute of its making. He paid the bills and he did practically everything else as well. Early in the making of the picture he disagreed with Luther Reed, whom he had hired as director, and took over the direction himself. Aviation is his hobby, that and golf. He has been flying since he was fourteen years old, which may be the reason for his slight deafness. Built like Colonel Lindbergh, tall and lanky, there is something Western about his appearance. He rushed about, though, like a true New Yorker, even though this was his first visit to New York since he was a child. Of his picture, of his four years of work, of his great financial risk—or is it folly?—he had only this to say:—"I think it's good."

BRICK by BRICK

by M. C. BADCOCK

Consider the bricklayer. Brick by brick, slowly, laboriously, he lays them one by one.

For a long time it seems as if nothing is happening.

Yet, brick by brick, something is being built. Soon it will take shape, and the monotonous motions of the man laying the bricks will be shown to be not so purposeless as they might at first have seemed.

You can build anything with bricks—provided you go on long enough.

You can build a cottage or a castle—remembering that a castle takes more bricks than a cottage.

But with one brick you can build nothing at all. It is just a brick; nothing more.

It is valueless—except as one of many bricks.

Advertising, like bricklaying, is a matter of persistency. If you go on long enough you are bound to build something. The longer you go on the bigger the thing you will build. But unless you go on, you will build nothing at all.

ZIEGFELD ON THE "NOSE" SIDE

ANYBODY who thinks that eyes or lips are important to a beautiful girl, is according to Florenz Ziegfeld, barking up the wrong tree. Zeigfeld's first try in films is "Whoopee," starring that quaintly whimsical comedian, Eddie Cantor, which is now playing at The Tivoli, London. Produced by Samuel Goldwyn, "Whoopee" brings the results of Ziegfeld's connoisseurship of feminine beauty before us. According to Florenz Ziegfeld, "noses" are the first factor in beauty. "Eyes, hair, complexion and figure she must have, of course. A beautiful mouth is not absolutely necessary, but her chin is second in importance to her nose. A girl may have all the other things that make for beauty, but she must have a good nose before she may be called beautiful. I think we naturally look at other persons' noses first." When you see "Whoopee," you can judge the results of Ziegfeld's choice.

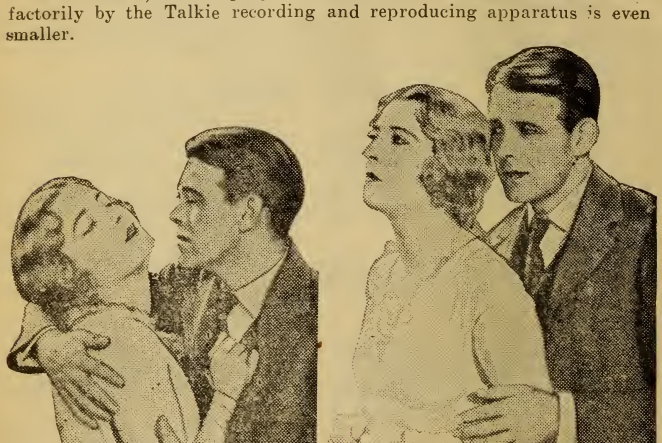
A LADY TO LOVE

THIS is the first picture in which Vilma Banky has had an "all talking" part and she can be said to have emerged from what any cosmopolitan film actress must look upon as an ordeal.

By this is not meant that the taking of the picture or playing of the part must have been more than ordinarily trying, but that, for a woman who has, so far, been in the front rank of her profession, the setting of a new standard must be viewed with deep misapprehension.

Many beautiful women, fine actresses even, are quite unsuitable for the film camera, but the proportion of voices that can be handled satisfactorily by the Talkie recording and reproducing apparatus is even smaller.



To all of the acknowledged film stars, therefore, the coming of the Talkies must have been a period of anxiety, that is until they had done their first full length talking part.

How much more the Foreign or Cosmopolitan artiste has to fear!

Vilma Banky's admirers, and there are, quite reasonably, many will be relieved to know that she reproduces very well indeed. This was foreshadowed by a few lines spoken in her last picture, but "A Lady to Love," which is in a number of London and Suburban districts this week, will show that she has not lost prestige.

Vilma Banky, in other words, like Greta Garbo, has pulled through.

The story concerns an engagement between a town waitress and a countryman whom she has not seen, and is a fairly adequate vehicle for Miss Banky, Robert Ames, and the supporting cast.

THE TRAVELLING MEDICINE SHOW REVIVED

TWENTY years ago the travelling medicine man was a familiar figure in market places and on village greens. He toured the country with a travelling show which entertained until a sufficient audience was gathered. Then followed a ready sale of various quack remedies among the more readily gulled members of the audience, interspersed with tooth-pulling, during which the band played lustily to drown the victim's cries.

The medicine man, with his imposing Indians, vaudeville "turns," and his own ready gift of the gab and repartee, made up a great entertainment for the bystander. Those who remember the medicine show in all its glory will want to see "The Medicine Man," an entertaining and hilarious talkie.

"The Medicine Man" tells the adventures of an itinerant medicine man who vended a cure-all that removed corns and table stains, toned up the liver, grew fresh eyelashes, cured skin diseases and doubled the mileage of a motor-car.

Woven in this entertaining film is a romance between the "doctor" and a little village girl. Jack Benny is the doctor, while Betty Bronson, the "Peter Pan" girl, plays the role of the village Cinderella.

HELL HARBOUR

ON our Cover is a picture of Lupe Velez, who is starring in "Hell Harbour," a Talkie that is to be seen in most districts.

It has been produced by Henry King, the maker of "The White Sister," "Stella Dallas," and a number of silent films.

Mr. King made "Hell Harbour" "on location," that is to say he took the players, cameras and, in fact, all that he need, to Tampa, 3,000 miles from Hollywood, on the west coast of Florida.

There he built an entire village as a background for the story of Anita, Joseph, Bob Wade, Marry Morgan, and the rest.

Played by Lupe Velez, Jean Hersholt and John Holland, who all work well and quite adequately portray the characters alloted to them, the picture is a credit even to a man of Henry King's calibre. It is not easily believed that this is Mr. King's first all Talking film, but it is the case.

The difficulties must have been very great, but the result has justified the effort and, set in the natural beauties of Tampa, that not too novel tale of a beautiful girl, young, vivacious, lovable and troublesome, brutal father, unwanted suitor, and then Bob Wade is splendid entertainment.

Films you may see this week

Balaclava:—Founded, of course, on the famous battle. The "Charge of the Light Brigade" is thrilling and the film as a whole is spectacular.

Behind the Make Up:—The story is of stage folk with a "two men—one woman" theme. William Powell, Hall Skelly portray effectively the principal male parts, with Fay Wray and Kay Francis.

The Busybody:—A good film for those who wish to be amused. Harry Green is excellent as the Jewish busybody.

Dancing Feet:—All about an American actress. Tuneful and quite bright.

The Furies:—A mystery film that is very well acted and should please all those who like to be puzzled until the end.

Good Intentions:—An interesting film. Edmund Lowe as the wealthy crook who wants to leave his "past" behind is excellent and, as his inspiration, Marguerite Churchill is good.

Hell Harbour:—Splendid entertainment. A fine, well arranged picture in a beautiful setting.

Hells Angels:—A most thrilling experience, to see this film.

Hold Everything:—Winnie Lightner, who has that quality, rare among film stars, real genius, again provides us with excellent entertainment in an otherwise ordinary film.

Journey's End:—Everyone who has not yet seen this film should do so before it is too late.

Just For A Song:—A very tuneful and pleasing film which gives Lilian Davies and Roy Royston numerous opportunities.

A Lady to Love:—The story of a man who becomes engaged by post.

The Laughing Lady:—An interesting film, the plot of which is set "after the divorce."

Man Trouble:—A night club story.

The Medicine Man:—Tale of a market place quack. Amusing with an ordinary plot.

Mystery of Life:—A film to be seen by everybody.

Those Who Dance:—A "fast life" picture.

White Devil:—Well chosen as a partner, this week, of "Mystery of Life."

Whoopee:—You should see this film if only for Eddie Cantor, the new artist.

ENEMIES—NOW FRIENDS

THE drama which unfolds behind the Studio scenes is never-ending. One of the strangest stories of Hollwood was revealed when a former British air ace and an ex-member of Richthofen's flying circus were engaged to take part in "Hell's Angels", the air spectacle which is now running at The London Pavilion. The flyers were Rudolph Schad, one of the few surviving members of Richthofen's famous flying circus, and Joseph J. Ince, former British ace and member of the Fourth Australian Squadron of the Royal Flying Corps. More than 12 years ago, Schad, who survived the war with 14 confirmed air victories, brought down an English plane at Verdun. The British flyer, seriously hurt, was removed from the wreckage of his ship. In accord with the aerial war code, Schad has his opponent removed to a German hospital. He recovered eventually, and at the duration of war was released. When Howard Hughes began filming "Hell's Angels", Schad and Ince were among the many ex-war aces who were signed to fly in the picture.

"Haven't we met before?" Ince said to Schad when they met on the field.

"I don't recall—but perhaps it is so," said the former German Ace, speaking with a slight accent. Ince recalled the incident in France, and the German flyer recollected that the British airman to whom he was talking was the pilot he had brought down and taken prisoner in the war. Both Schad and Ince were engaged to take part in the air-fighting sequences of "Hell's Angels." Ironically, they again fought against each other, with movie cameras filming the action. Schad flew in the picture as a member of Richthofen's flying circus, and Ince opposed him as a member of the British Royal Air Force. Schad and Ince were two of more than a score of former World War aces who took part in "Hell's Angels."

Published reports and rumours to the contrary, there was only one fatal accident during the filming of air scenes for "Hell's Angels," now playing at The London Pavilion. This was the German bomber crash in which Phil Jones, mechanic, was killed after Al Wilson, pilot, escaped from the falling plane in his parachute. Al Johnson and Phil Phillips, "Hell's Angels" flyers, were fatally hurt in crashes which occured, not during the filming of the picture, but while the pilots were transporting planes from one city to another. A number of tragic airplane crashes in connection with the filming of air pictures have bee erroneously attributed to "Hell's Angels." The foregoing account is indisputably correct. Coincidentally, 24 of the 200 pilots who flew in "Hell's Angels" were subsequently killed while engaged in ordinary commercial aviation.

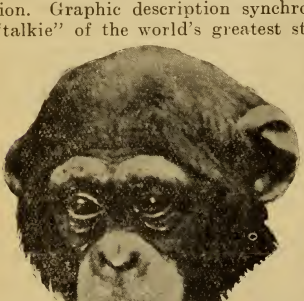
THE MYSTERY OF LIFE

ALTHOUGH this film, made by Ufa, has a title that points to its being of an educational nature, it must not be thought that there is not entertainment.

For those who go to see this really remarkable picture there is entertainment of a high order.

One need hardly say that it is the story of the evolution of man that is put upon the screen.

The Story of Life, of Evolution, presents Nature's struggle and progress, in dialogue and pictures. Herein is told, in words and dramatic scenes, how all animals fight for bare existence, for mates; and the progress of the world from microscopic cells to modern civilization. Graphic description synchronised with gripping pictures. A "talkie" of the world's greatest story—the story of the world.



Skycrapers, aeroplanes, all the wonders of the machine are built upon the laws of nature. Through all life is the urge of hunger, the need for mates, the perpetuation of the species. Each must fight for itself and its successors. On this is founded all endeavour, all purpose.

By the cooling and condensing of a flaming mass of gases, were the sun and worlds first formed. The world at first a ball of fire, cooling slowly in the ages, cooling till solid rocks appeared, cooling till water condensed, flowing together, making seas and oceans.

Life came into this empty world. We know not how—whether brought from some other world or created in the archaic seas. At first living creatures were simple single-celled creatures, feeding by wrapping themselves round their prey, moving by flowing along, and reproducing by simple division. Several such cells by banding together form a colony, and the first big upward step is taken. Specialisation begins, sex cells are developed. So began the forerunners of the complex animals, such creatures as the jelly fish and the sea anemone.

Next arose the beginnings of a backbone. First in worm-like creatures, then fish which spread and dominated the seas. By migration on to land were formed the amphibians, the reptiles, and last the birds and mammals.

From the higher mammals arose primitive man. Living in caves, using simple stone implements, he fought his battles with nature, and, aided by a brain, he fought and progressed. Later races built their homes on piles in lakes for protection. Invention began, and with them the dawn of modern humanity.

In the development of the human embryo to-day is repeated this evolution stage by stage. Single cells, cell colonies, the beginnings of a backbone, a fish's gills, primitive limbs, a tail and the hair of his distant ancestry.

Through all the world to-day the fight continues. Animals adapt themselves to special circumstances that they may survive. Feet become paddles and wings, wings become paddles, each for the betterment of the species. In the dark caves of Dalmatia an animal has gone back, has lost its eyes, and lost its colour, gone back to the water and fish's gills; it is doomed to extinction, there is no going back in this stream of life.

Male fights male with horns, with talons, and with beaks. Males display their colours and their feathers, using every means to obtain mates. Tragedies are enacted every day. Nature is remorseless in her laws—animal preying on animal for food, females killing and devouring the males so that food shall not be wasted.

The young are cared for that the species may go on. Male fish guarding the eggs, mammals nursing and caring for the young—the future generation.

So the world has progressed. Man commands every corner of the world by virtue of his brain, his skill and his inventions. The laws of Nature, the urge of hunger, love, and the desire to live have borne him upwards and still upwards.

Some trouble was experienced in getting the censor to pass the picture, and there has been a great deal of controversy on the subject.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the Chief Constable of Manchester says, "My Officer reports that the film is of good educational character and produced in clean, wholesome manner."

To Our Readers

WE HAVE decided to institute, as a regular feature of the WEEKLY KINEMA GUIDE, a Film Criticism Competition.

One Guinea will be sent, each week, to the reader who sends in the best criticism. The film chosen should be one that is being shown at a London or Suburban Kinema Theatre during the whole or part of the week in question.

The criticism which, in the opinion of the Editor, is the best, will be published in a subsequent issue of the Weekly Kinema Guide. Criticisms should be of not less than two hundred and not more than five hundred words.

In sending criticisms

(a) The week during which the film was seen.

(b) The name and address of the reader (Mr., Mrs. or Miss) should be stated on the same sheet of paper on which the article is written or started, as well as upon the coupon at the foot of this page. ONLY ONE SIDE OF THE PAPER TO BE USED.

The entry of a criticism shall be held as authority for publication in the Weekly Kinema Guide.

The Editor, whose decision shall be absolutely Final, does not undertake to reply to letters on this subject, although he will, of course, answer all and every communication that is possible.

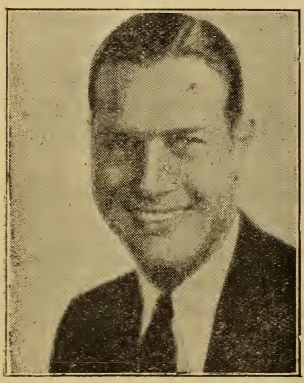
BURNING UP

THE "speed" tempo of this picture has quite a pleasantly rejuvenating effect, at least it should have upon a normal person. One must be very hard bitten not to be thrilled at the way these fellows tear about at break neck speed. We may, many of us, look upon the old cowboy stuff as old fashioned and even wonder why it was that we used to sit and enjoy one film after another week after week, in which the chief action consisted in last minute dashes on horseback to outwit the villain, who never went quite so fast as Tom Mix and his fellow heroes.



We knew, all of us, exactly what was going to happen at the end and yet we liked it.

Film fare is richer these days, but it is still good to see again an old friend, however unsophisticated, and this is an old friend. Dressed in modern clothes, of course, cars and motorcycles instead of horses and buggies but just as thrilling to those still young enough to be thrilled.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS

LIKE "Man Trouble," this film has a Night Club setting.

The story starts off with Tom (Tom Moore) as a New York Policeman and Julia (Blanche Sweet), a night club "hostess." They fall in love, marry and commence what, in view of their happiness and Tom's promotion, bids fair to be a promising future.

The gift of an expensive cigarette case reminds the girl of her more exciting life and trouble begins.

The plot is not exceptional, but the picture, for all that is interesting in that a number of new and rather original camera tricks have been used. One in particular, now named the "street eye view," was made possible by an intricate arrangement of camera lights and microphones and the result is really very striking. The picture-goer gets the impressions by sight and sound of Julia's progress along the street, round corners, into a building and so on.

So much care is exercised in these days that one gets to look upon sound pictures as a common or garden sort of affair and does not realise how extremely difficult are some of the "shots." As silent pictures, the difficulties were met by meticulous arrangements of light and cameras, but that is by no means all that matters now. It is not sufficient that a camera, for instance, be moved along behind the retreating back of an actor to get a proper impression of his action.

The camera, lights and sound recording devices must all be adjusted and synchronised and another new technique has come into being.

BRICK by BRICK

by M. C. BADCOCK

Consider the bricklayer. Brick by brick, slowly, laboriously, he lays them one by one.

For a long time it seems as if nothing is happening.

Yet, brick by brick, something is being built. Soon it will take shape, and the monotonous motions of the man laying the bricks will be shown to be not so purposeless as they might at first have seemed.

You can build anything with bricks—provided you go on long enough.

You can build a cottage or a castle—remembering that a castle takes more bricks than a cottage.

But with one brick you can build nothing at all. It is just a brick; nothing more.

It is valueless—except as one of many bricks.

Advertising, like bricklaying, is a matter of persistency. If you go on long enough you are bound to build something. The longer you go on the bigger the thing you will build. But unless you go on, you will build nothing at all.

A NOTORIOUS AFFAIR

BILLIE DOVE, Kaye Francis, Basil Rathbone, Montague Love and Kenneth Thomson give us, in this picture, their very finished and competent representation of English "County" and "Society" life.

One cannot pretend that it is real. It is, in many instances, quite inaccurate, but the story is well worked out and, if it were not of England and the English, convincing.

The plot concerns Patricia who marries, against the wishes of her own people, the penniless musician, Gherardi, who, with her help and that of the Countess Balakireff, becomes the "idol of the public." Success is too much for him and the tale tells of the results of his vanity.

Montagu Love fills, for him, an unusual part in that he is not a villain.

MURDER WILL OUT

A THRILLER, this one.

Mysterious threats of death, ominous hieroglyphics, blood-stained dagger, poisoned cigarettes, motor boats and many other similar ingredients go to make this film worth puzzling over.

These murder stories are so often alike that it is a change to meet one that is handled in a new way, as the author and producer can claim to have handled this one.

BORDER ROMANCE

THIS is quite a bright, jolly show, pleasantly filled with adventure, comedy, romance and music. It is really a musical comedy picture and as such is amusing and enjoyable.

The names of the characters give one an excellent indication of the entertainment, Conchita Cortez, Bob Hamlin, Nina, Slim, Buck Adams, Captain of the Rurales and so on. Just like a "Daly's" cast.

Produced adequately, with pleasant melodies and efficient acting this will brighten, at least for a time, what looks like being another wet and miserably dull week in "London and the South Eastern Counties."

DUMB-BELLS IN ERMINE

ALTHOUGH the plot is a bit thin there is plenty of life and movement in this well presented picture.

Barbara Kent and Robert Armstrong lead a cast that includes Arthur Hoyt, Beryl Mercer and James Gleason, who also wrote the "snappy" dialogue.

Neither strong drama nor brilliant comedy, it will, with its story of a pugilist, a maiden fair, of course, a sanctimonious mother and a spoil sport, pussyfoot reformer, prove to be a very bright and amusing piece of entertainment and, after all, in this rotten weather we can do with something enlivening.

Films you may see this week

"Battle of Paris."—A musical show featuring the well-known stage star, Gertrude Lawrence.

"Border Romance."—A tuneful Mexican Musical Comedy with a love interest and plenty of life.

"Burning Up."—A bright, rapid motor racing love drama with thrills. Featuring Richard Arlen and Mary Brian.

"Desert Nights."—An exciting tale of villains and heroes, all equally uncomfortable in a very hot desert. Well produced. Featuring John Gilbert and Mary Nolan.

"Dumbells in Ermine."—An amusing if somewhat improbable tale, the principal characters in which represent high-spirited youth and hypocritical middle age. Very bright and "snappy."

"The Girl Said No!"—A story featuring William Haines as the boy who goes into the City from College. A part that Mr. Haines has played before.

"Hot Curves."—A baseball story featuring the Jewish Comedian, Benny Rubin. Not particularly refined but amusing.

"Lights and Shadows."—A Night Club story with a New York background, a love interest. Tom Moore and Blanche Sweet.

"Mamba."—A spectacular film, well staged, the plot of which is fixed in East Africa. Really thrilling and convincing. Featuring Jean Hersholt, who acts really splendidly. Worth seeing.

"The Man from Blankleys."—Screen adaption of the well-known F. Anstey stage play. Featuring John Barrymore, who takes the part once played by Charles Hawtrey.

"Murder Will Out."—A really puzzling and thrilling mystery murder play with Noah Beery, Lila Lee and Jack Mulhall. Plenty of excitement.

MAMBA

MAMBA is an interesting release this week if only for the fact that it is the first all talking picture to be filmed entirely in Technicolour.

The action takes place in East Africa at the outbreak of War in 1914 and gives what is, to many of us, a new outlook upon the relations at the difficult time between the neighbouring English and German communities, whose feelings were in many ways less bitter than their compatriots at home.

Mamba, the Swahili name for one of the more deadly snakes, is that by which the natives spoke of August Bolte (Jean Hersholt), a wealthy German planter. Generally despised by his fellow Europeans he returns to Germany and brings out, as his wife, Helen (Eleanor Boardman).

Drama, in the form of the normal triangle, builds itself around these two and Karl von Reiden (Ralph Forbes).

A great deal of trouble has very obviously been expended over this film, which is said to have cost a quarter of a million dollars to make. There are more than a thousand natives in it and some of the riverside "sets" are exceedingly effective.

THE MAN FROM BLANKLEYS

SOME of us will remember the story, by F. Anstey, of Lord Strathpeffer, quite gently intoxicated, dropping in on the Tidmarshes and being mistaken for the guest hired for the purpose of impressing the uncle from the States.

It is good fun and worth going to see. For those who saw Hawtrey in the part it will be interesting to see John Barrymore who, while having of late been seen more often as a tragedian, is also a comedy part actor of no mean calibre.

HOT CURVES

THE title of this picture is very misleading. Fathers! Fear not! Your sons will not "get ideas" from this film. They will not be treated to unlimited views of the female form divine.

Hot curves, in this case, are those through which the ball travels after it has left the hand of the "pitcher" in a baseball game.

Not a particularly refined form of entertainment but full of laughs. Benny Rubin gets most of these as Benny Goldberg. His work is on the crude side but he is a real comedian. Rex Lease is the other male lead and the heroine is played by Miss Alice Day.

DESERT NIGHTS

FOR "Deserts Nights," a film that is to be seen in most districts this week and in which the cast includes Mary Nolan, John Gilbert and Ernest Torrence, many of the incidents take place in barren country and they were taken into the desert for three weeks.

They were not, during that time, allowed to trim their hair or shave their beards.

Any man who, for some reason or other, has been forced to remain unshaven for such a period will appreciate the discomfort to which the men were subjected.

The women were not much more happy; they did not, could not in fact, use make up. Miss Nolan alone had to appear at times before the camera with "make up" on her face and for this purpose a special ice box was carried.

There are thrills in this picture and it should be enjoyed by many of our readers.

WILLIAM HAINES plays the part of a lad leaving College and entering, more or less successfully upon a city career. It is not for Mr. Haines a new type of part either, in fact, or on the "pictures" for, before becoming the star that he is William Haines was what is known in the U.S. as a bond salesman.

This film was directed by Sam Wood who, in Hollywood is recognised as a particularly succesful director of "young people" pictures. Some folks call him the "Peter Pan Director," and he is understood to be proud of his perennial youthful outlook.

Marie Dressler plays in this film and is, as always, a perfect joy.

THE FLIRTING WIDOW

THE story is taken from A. E. W. Mason's book, "Green Stockings," and it is not only the tale that, in this film, is British. Beautiful and, as it happens, brilliant, Miss Dorothy Mackaill hails from Yorkshire. Basil Rathbone was born in Jo'burg, Anthony Bushell is English as is Emily Fitzroy.

The story is of British people in their own country and the result is a most amusing and enjoyable affair.

APPLAUSE

THE story of this film is taken from the novel by Beth Brown, who was once, herself, a showgirl and who is now a successful authoress. She knows what she is talking about and in this picture the more unhappy side of a showgirl's life is stressed.

April Darling is born in Kitty Darling's theatre dressing-room after the news of the conviction, for murder, of her husband.

At five years of age the child is sent away to be educated in a convent but, twelve years after, she comes back to the questionable environment of the touring company.

The tale is sordid but the picture is presented with some sincerity and truthfulness and is worth seeing.

SECOND WIFE

Lila Lee.

"SECOND WIFE"—adapted from the stage play, "All The King's Men"—essays a theme of real and world-wide interest—can second marriage be successful? Is not the past a disconcerting shadow over the present, the old over the new? Or is it only ultra-sensitiveness and selfishness that threatens the second partnership, so that once these are subdued the new relationship may be as happy as the one that went before.

These are the poignant questions raised by the present picture. Closely related to some of the hard facts of life, they are handled by the producers with understanding and, moreover, with what seems to have been a sincere endeavour to present his real ideas on the subject.

If only the producers would believe that the public, at least our British public, want their films to "state a case," as the law puts it, they would be more successful both from the artistic and box office points of view.

Many producers of films, as well as stage plays, start off with the idea that they must of necessity study the opinions of their audiences and turn out, in almost every case, merely another version of something that has "gone down well" before.

We here are still an intelligent public. We don't always want to see Ibsen's plays when we go to the theatre or to the pictures, nor do we wish, every time, to be faced with a production that calls for deep or serious thought, but we do ask for sincerity.

We may not agree with the views of authors or producers, but surely we all like to feel that the people who are showing us their idea of life or of some angle of life really are trying to tell us what they think about it.

Much must depend upon the players and, in this film, "Second Wife," the young widower, his second wife and the faithful old servant are faithfully portrayed by Conrad Nagel, Lila Lee and Mary Carr.

BRICK by BRICK

by M. C. BADCOCK

Consider the bricklayer. Brick by brick, slowly, laboriously, he lays them one by one.

For a long time it seems as if nothing is happening.

Yet, brick by brick, something is being built. Soon it will take shape, and the monotonous motions of the man laying the bricks will be shown to be not so purposeless as they might at first have seemed.

You can build anything with bricks—provided you go on long enough.

You can build a cottage or a castle—remembering that a castle takes more bricks than a cottage.

But with one brick you can build nothing at all. It is just a brick ; nothing more.

It is valueless—except as one of many bricks.

Advertising, like bricklaying, is a matter of persistency. If you go on long enough you are bound to build something. The longer you go on the bigger the thing you will build. But unless you go on, you will build nothing at all.

SO THIS IS LONDON

WILL ROGERS, who has been well-known to the film-going public since 1920, when he was first seen in a series of comedy films, silent, of course, stars in this picture.

His first talkie role was in "They Had to See Paris" and he proved to be even more amusing with a voice than had been the case when silence was imposed upon him.

Like nearly all true comedians, Rogers started life outside the theatrical profession.

His more youthful experiences included a period of instruction at a Military Academy, after which he became a ranch hand in Oklahoma, where he learnt to ride and rope.

His early engagements on the boards were in New York, Hammersteins' Roof, Ziegfields' Follies and so on.

After three years of silent films he signed on with Fox Movietone and he starred in "They Had to See Paris" under that management.

Apart from these activities, Will Rogers has been an author, a lecturer and a correspondent for well over a hundred newspapers.

This week he is to be seen and enjoyed in "So This is London," supported by Irene Rich and Maureen O'Sullivan.

REDEMPTION

THE producers of this film claim that it has provided John Gilbert with his most dramatic role.

"The Living Corpse," Tolstoy's great book, is the source drawn upon by Arthur Hopkins when he wrote 'Redemption" as a drama and now Dorothy Farnum has re-adapted it for use on the screen.

Fred Niblo, of "Ben Hur" fame, has produced the picture which does not, even after the two adaptations necessary, depart very considerably from the story as originally written by Tolstoy.

A subject such as this needs serious consideration and study before production and the claim made by "Metro Goldwyn Mayer," that their research experts spent several months in investigating Russian characteristics and "atmosphere" seems to be justified by the result.

The story of Fedya, the Russian officer, drawn away from his beloved wife and associations by Lisa, the Gipsy, is in the film, as it was in the novel, a physcological study. The great difference between the two Fedyas, that of the book and that of the film lies in the fact stated, as reason given for his degradation. Tolstoy makes him a madman, but Miss Farnum brings out hereditary gipsy characteristics as the cause for his fall.

The film is a good one and is definitely worth seeing. The picture of pre-revolution Russia is convincing and the characters of Fedya, Masha, Victor and Lisa are well drawn by John Gilbert, Renée Adoree, Conrad Nagel and Eleanor Boardman.

Anyone that saw and liked "The Cossacks" will enjoy "Redemption."

THIRTEEN IS HER LUCKY NUMBER AND FRIDAY HER LUCKY DAY!

KAY FRANCIS, who plays opposite Billie Dove, in "A NOTORIOUS AFFAIR," which is to be seen in many kinemas this week, defies superstition by claiming that thirteen is her lucky number. Moreover, she asserts that she finds it all the more lucky if it falls on a Friday.

And she proves it by announcing that she was born on a Friday, January 13th. Furthermore, it was the thirteenth month of her mother's marriage.

Kay, altogether, has been to thirteen schools and classes (a record in itself, one imagines) and it was on the thirteenth of July that she got her first job on the stage, and she applied for her first job in the movies on the thirteenth of the month, and got it!

She always looks forward to a Friday that falls on the thirteenth, declaring that on such a day she always has a good time, and, when her guests will allow her, she prefers to have thirteen people sitting at her table when she is giving a dinner party.

In "A Notorious Affair" Kay Francis takes the role of the "other woman." It is she who entices Basil Rathbone from his happy home and Billie Dove!

THE TALE OF AN EGG!

THIS is the story of an egg, or rather two eggs. It is also the story of Dorothy Mackaill, starring in "The Flirting Widow" and "Man Trouble."

During the making of a recent picture, Dorothy had to appear in a cabin scene, and she had to be carrying a basket of eggs.

Now as everybody knows, Dorothy has a sense of humour, and it occurred to her that it would be a fine joke to have an egg blown and throw the empty shell at Edmund Burns, who played in the heavy role in the picture. After an obliging property man had blown the egg for her, and placed it back on the top of the basket, Dorothy blithely tripped into the cabin, reached for the egg shell, and threw, hard!

The egg went true to its mark, striking Burns full in the waistcoat, then, to her horror she observed it break with great damage.

Dorothy had picked up the wrong egg!

Films you may see this week

"Applause":—A story of the hardships of a beautiful showgirl in a touring burlesque revue company. What appears to be a sincere endeavour to portray this not very happy subject with truth and understanding. Starring Helen Morgan and Joan Peers.

"Be Yourself":—A boxing-cabaret dancer comedy tale that, while being light, is bright and entertaining. Starring Robert Armstrong and Fanny Brice.

"The Flirting Widow":—An A. E. W. Mason tale well adapted and produced. The story tells of a family who try to get the eldest daughter "married off." A bright, jolly film starring Dorothy Mackaill, Leila Hyams and Basil Rathbone.

"Redemption"—Screen adaption of Tolstoy's book, "The Living Corpse." John Gilbert, Eleanor Boardman, Renee Adoree and Conrad Nagel help to make a convincing picture of Russia under the old Régime.

"Second Wife":—A story of the old problem of the remarried widower. Conrad Nagel, Lila Lee and Mary Carr in a serious and interesting picture.

While every care has been taken to ensure accuracy the publishers cannot hold themselves responsible for any errors or omissions.

BE YOURSELF

THE story is of a boxer and is taken from a book by Joseph Jackson, "The Champ." As the heroine is a night club star; it will be appreciated that this is "the mixture much as before."

There is, in the picture, a boxing match and the production is bright and amusing.

EVERY DOG HAS ITS DAY!

EVEN A MONGREL SOMETIMES PROVES MORE USEFUL THAN A THOROUGHBRED!

LOUD barks, little yaps, and small squeals were heard during the making of "A Notorious Affair," the new Billie Dove picture, which was released last week.

Whilst the picture was being shot, the Director decided that he wanted 155 mongrel dogs for an English village scene. A call was sent out, and in consequence all kinds and breeds of dogs broke into the movies.

While the thoroughbred and pedigree canines stood by in their cushioned kennels, waiting their turn, every youngster within a radius of five miles of First National studios were teaming in, answering the call with their own or their neighbours' dogs. It was quite a time before all the animals could be sorted out, but finally this was done, and a very realistic sequence was sound photographed.

With the small sum that each youngster received for his trouble it is to be hoped that at least some of it was expended on an extra hearty meal for the canines, but it is suspected that the animals' work only resulted in an unusually large supply of confectionery for the youngsters!

WE have decided to alter slightly the conditions for our Film Criticism Competition.

For this week's winning article we are offering by arrangement with one of the foremost London Dance Schools, a TWO GUINEA COURSE OF BALL-ROOM DANCING LESSONS.

———o———

Miss McCullagh, who has in 1929 and 1930 won the Professional Championship of the World and the Riviera Championship is very well-known indeed and it is at one or other of her Schools at which the lessons will be given.

We would remind our readers that all they have to do to qualify for this prize is to visit a London or Suburban Kinema and write us an article on one or other of the feature films that you see.

The article may be of any number of words and the name and address of the contributor should be written on the sheet on which the article is written or commenced as well as on the coupon at the foot of this page.

DANCE HALL

UNTIL now Miss Olive Borden has been of those who, daring Anita Loos to do her worst, graced the world with jet black hair.

No doubt she will, again, be seen as a brunette, but to those who see her in "Dance Hall" she will, surprisingly, appear as one "whom gentlemen prefer," a blonde.

"Dance Hall" is a bright picture. The plot is of youthful foolishness, calf love and other diseases of the young.

For those who want strong meat, "Dance Hall" will prove disappointing, but to the many seeking lighter fare it will give pleasure.

CHILDREN OF PLEASURE

DANNY REGAN is a writer of songs, a denizen, in fact, of what "high-brow" and "middle-brow" Americans call Tin Pan Alley.

The story of the picture revolves around him and his work, and the producers claim to have painted, here, a true picture of that particular slice of life.

There are a number of tuneful songs and the production, as a whole, is bright and enjoyable.

BRICK by BRICK

by M. C. BADCOCK

Consider the bricklayer. Brick by brick, slowly, laboriously, he lays them one by one.

For a long time it seems as if nothing is happening.

Yet, brick by brick, something is being built. Soon it will take shape, and the monotonous motions of the man laying the bricks will be shown to be not so purposeless as they might at first have seemed.

You can build anything with bricks—provided you go on long enough.

You can build a cottage or a castle—remembering that a castle takes more bricks than a cottage.

But with one brick you can build nothing at all. It is just a brick; nothing more.

It is valueless—except as one of many bricks.

Advertising, like bricklaying, is a matter of persistency. If you go on long enough you are bound to build something. The longer you go on the bigger the thing you will build. But unless you go on, you will build nothing at all.

THE two portraits on this page are of Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes who, having played opposite one another in silent films, have now "come together" again in their first all talking partnership.

"The Runaway Bride," starting with an elopement and immediately afterwards a murder and a robbery, is an exciting affair and better than many "crook" plays.

BACK PAY

AN old-fashioned plot, in this picture, gives Corinne Griffith, Grant Withers and Montagu Love little chance to be other than competent. Miss Griffith and the rest of them do their best, and give us quite a good show, but it can hardly be said that the result is "a mirror held to life."

AROUND THE CORNER

The picture is an amusing one and contains much fun without any offence.

Films you may see this week

"Around the Corner":—An amusing Jewish-Irish comedy, starring George Sidney, Charlie Murray and Joan Peers.

"Back Pay":—A melodramatic story carried out moderately well, starring Corinne Griffiths, Grant Withers and Montagu Love.

"Children of Leisure":—The love story of a song writer, with a background of "high life." Several melodious songs. Starring Lawrence Gray, Benny Rubin, Helen Johnson and Wynne Gibson.

"Dance Hell":—A "young love" story with a setting that is explained in the title. Starring Olive Borden, Joseph Cawthorne and Arthur Lake.

"The Lady from the Sea":—A British picture of the Kentish Coast Lifeboatmen.

"One Mad Kiss":—A Mexican musical show with a tale of love and plenty of melody. Starring Mona Maris, Antonia Moreno and a tenor new to this country, Don Jose Mojica.

"The Runaway Bride":—A story that, starting with an elopement, develops into a murder mystery. Starring Mary Aston and Lloyd Hughes.

"The Storm":—Not generally released but showing at the newly opened Theatre at Elephant and Castle. Very thrilling. Starring Lupe Velez, William Boyd and Paul Cavanagh.

ANOTHER "Super Cinema" will be open by the time most of our readers have received their copy of this week's WEEKLY KINEMA GUIDE. This time it is at the Elephant and Castle.

The Trocadero, it is said, will seat 6,000 and, as the newest of the "supers," it contains novel and useful features. Among such novelties not the least attractive is the large inside waiting-room.

It is claimed that this Talkie Theatre, for that is what the management call it, is the largest in the world and that 10,000 men were employed on the building.

The slogan of the management has been "Taking Piccadilly to The Elephant and Castle," and, from what one can see, so far, they have certainly given South London the comforts of the West End at reasonable prices. The programme with which they open includes the World's release of the new Gaumont picture, "Bed and Breakfast," starring Jane Baxter and Richard Cooper, and "The Storm," featuring Lupe Velez and William Boyd. On the stage there will be Miss Lilian Burgess, and The O'Gorman Brothers, and etc.

THE LADY FROM THE SEA

A BRITISH picture, this one, and, as usual, like the curate's egg, good in parts.

But those parts are worth seeing, let there be no mistake about that.

We have not, in this country, the finished technique of Hollywood, nor have we, so it seems, the money to spend on "stupendous," "staggering" and "magnificent" productions, but we do know how to be sincere. This film is sincere and those of us who know and love our English Coasts will appreciate the picture, which is, in parts, beautiful and, in others, really thrilling.

ONE MAD KISS

THIS picture introduces Don Jose Mojica who leads, opposite Mona Maris, in a film with a conventional Spanish American story. They are, respectively, the gay and charming outlaw and the "hell cat" young beauty.

Don Jose Mojica has a pleasing tenor voice and, in a typically Spanish way, is good to look at.

He is of Spanish parentage and was born in Mexico, where his father owned a large property.

Having been sent to Mexico City to start training as a scientific farmer he decided that he would rather sing songs than sow seeds and, consequently, made for New York, where he got a job at the Metropolitan Opera House.

When he was twenty-one he obtained employment with the Chicago Civic Opera House and was soon singing opposite Mary Garden, Galli Curci, Freda Hempel and others of the great singers.

SONG OF MY HEART

THIS picture is an important one if only for the fact that it features John McCormack, the great Operatic Tenor.

The story, like McCormack himself, of course, is Irish and is pleasing though slight. What you will expect though, when you go to see and hear "Song of My Heart," is music and you will hear plenty of music.

The film is definitely worth seeing, or to be more correct, seeing and hearing for, naturally, built, as it has been, around John McCormack's voice, the great appeal is to the ear rather than to the eye.

The story was written by Tom Barry who wrote, also, "Courage," another film that is released this week.

Alice Joyce, Maureen O'Sullivan, little Tommy Clifford and John Garrick figure among the cast.

This is the first sound picture in which a part is taken by one of the really great singers. Hannen Swaffer has said, whether he meant to say it or not, that the sound-film is growing at the expense of the theatre. Does "A Song of My Heart" presage a similar state of affairs where music, and not only acting, is concerned?

JOURNEY'S END

Seen during present week, commencing December 15th.

Miss A. F. Sykes,
3, Eliot Place, Blackheath, S.E.3.

"JOURNEY'S END" is a superb film, magnificently acted. It gives one a faint idea of what the trenches were like, and is very tragic and sad.

The best of the numerous books and plays on the subject of the Great War, and the most talked of play of the century, "Journey's End" repeats its success as a film, and is, in the opinion of some "the greatest of all Talkies."

Colin Clive depicts the hero, Dennis Stanhope, to perfection, and has certainly got "inside the skin" of the character, a really fine one. So afraid is he of showing cowardice, somewhat like the hero of A. E. W. Mason's book, "The Four Feathers," that Captain Stanhope really imagines himself to be a coward. His nerves frayed and on edge by three years' continuous strain of that terrible warfare, Stanhope had got to depend for support and stimulation on the help of the whisky-bottle. Colin Clive was true to the life in depicting the fits of irritation and impatience which revealed the strain, and marred the otherwise fine character. Stanhope had sterling qualities of courage, resolution and an ideal of duty, in addition to a really affectionate nature and tenderness of comprehension. These fine traits are shown in his scenes with Osborne, with Hibbert, and the closing scene with the dying Raleigh, and he was justly admired and beloved by his men.

The other chief characters among the officers, Osborne, Trotter, Hibbert and young Raleigh are varying types, and no doubt were to be found plentifully in France from 1914 to 1918. Osborne is also an exceedingly fine character, level-headed, sane and loyal. To him, Trotter makes an excellent foil, good-humoured, happy-go-lucky, and taking things as they came, and very different in temperament from poor, nerve-racked young Hibbert.

The hero-worship of Raleigh for Stanhope is finely shown, and Raleigh's enthusiasm and zeal are well depicted. Mason, the soldier-servant, deserves his meed of praise, and so life-like is the simple story that it is strange to emerge again into the busy street, leaving the darkened-dug-out, with Stanhope brokenly turning away, and one small candle-flame glimmering in the deep gloom.

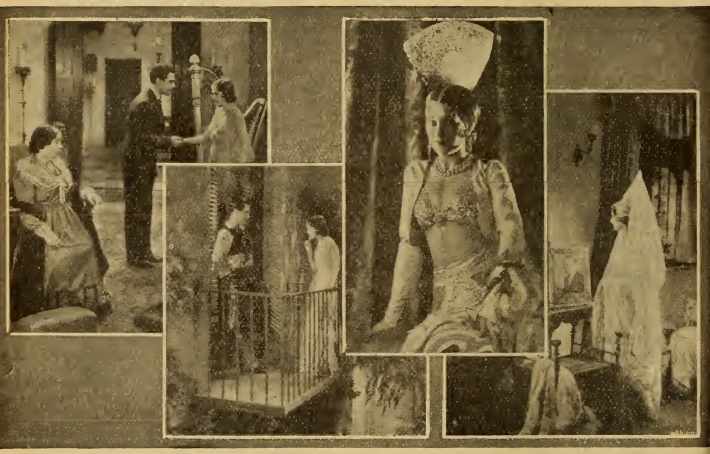
IN GAY MADRID

RAMON NAVARRO stars in this picture, which has a conventional sort of plot.

He has the opportunity of singing half-a-dozen pleasing melodies and, helped by the director, Robert Z. Leonard, and by Dorothy Jordan and Lottice Howell, he has provided us with an enjoyable entertainment.



MEDALS

THIS is, of course, an adaption of Sir James Barrie's "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals."

It is difficult, in speaking of a Barrie play, to refrain from the use of the word "whimsical."

Barrie is whimsical and it is not easy to find another word that quite fits the case. Whimsicality is not easy to "put over" on the screen, even the talking screen, but "Medals" gets as near to Barrie as, I think, the screen can get and that is not so near as many of us would like. Still, its a good film and you can't have everything.

BRICK by BRICK

by M. C. BADCOCK

Consider the bricklayer. Brick by brick, slowly, laboriously, he lays them one by one.

For a long time it seems as if nothing is happening.

Yet, brick by brick, something is being built. Soon it will take shape, and the monotonous motions of the man laying the bricks will be shown to be not so purposeless as they might at first have seemed.

You can build anything with bricks—provided you go on long enough.

You can build a cottage or a castle—remembering that a castle takes more bricks than a cottage.

But with one brick you can build nothing at all. It is just a brick; nothing more.

It is valueless—except as one of many bricks.

Advertising, like bricklaying, is a matter of persistency. If you go on long enough you are bound to build something. The longer you go on the bigger the thing you will build. But unless you go on, you will build nothing at all.

KINEMAS OF INTEREST

THE FORUM CINEMA, in Villiers Street, Charing Cross, is built on the site of the old Hungerford Music Hall, or, as it was known for many years, "Gatti's in the Arches."

The design of this picture theatre is interesting for it is housed in a railway arch beneath Charing Cross Station. The space was, of course, by no means unlimited and the result is clever and pleasing. There are no steps and no corners. Rear projection is employed. That is to say the projectors are situated behind, and not, as is more common, in front of the screen.

The air in the building is changed continually, and is cleaned and, if necessary warmed or cooled, as it enters. 15,000 cubic feet is washed and circulated through the theatre every minute.

The management call their house "The Kinema in the Centre of the World," and while some claim Piccadilly Circus and others the "Bank" as the hub of the earth's life, it must be admitted that this little theatre is truly central and "get-at-able."

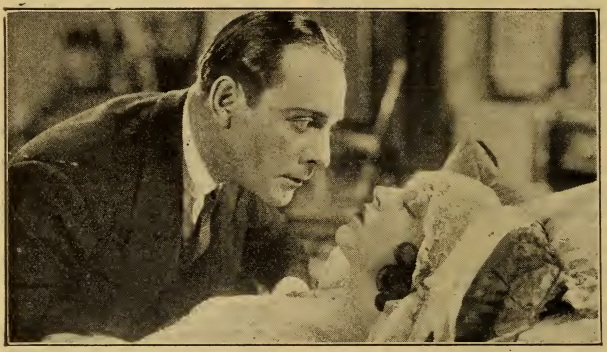
NEW ORLEANS

THE plot of "New Orleans" is different to most of its type in that the end is more convincing.

Alma Bennett, Ricardo Cortez and William Collier, Junr., lead the cast.



Love, friendship and horse-racing thrills all have a place in the picture which, while not exceptional, other than by reason of its ending, is entertaining.

Films you may see this week

"Courage":—A widowed mother's love for her seven children. Well done and acted by Belle Bennett and Marion Dixon lead the cast.

"Hit the Deck":—Talkie adaption of the "London Hippodrome" stage show. Bright and tuneful. Starring Jackie Oakie and Polly Walker.

"In Gay Madrid":—Ramon Navarro in a pleasing and musical production.

"Medals":—Screen Adaption of J. M. Barrie's play, "The Old Lady Shows her Medals." Starring Gary Cooper, Beryl Mercer and Daisy Belmore.

"New Orleans":—How a woman came between two good friends. Alma Bennett, Ricardo Cortez and William Collier, Junr.

"Rough Waters":—Rin Tin Tin in a typical rôle.

"Showgirl in Hollywood":—A film studio from the inside. Alice White and Jack Mulhall.

"Song of My Heart":—An Irish story with plenty of song. Starring Count John McCormack, the great Operatic Tenor.

"Wild Company":—A story of Father and Son. Starring H. B. Warner, Frank Albertson and Sharon Lynn.

COURAGE

OF all the themes that can be mishandled and made ridiculous, "Mother Love" is perhaps the most prominent.

As soon as anyone starts writing a story on this subject it seems to effect his ideas of sincerity in no small degree. Producers, when faced with such a plot seem to "go silly" and the results are almost invariably unreal.

"Courage" is a "Mother Love" story but with a difference; there are seven children and not the usual one.

Whether or not this plurality be the reason it should be admitted, at once, that "Courage" is better than most pictures of this type and is worth seeing.

Belle Bennett plays the part of the mother.

SHOW GIRL IN HOLLYWOOD

THIS picture shows a "Film within a Film" and, because of this is decidedly out of the ordinary.

Some of the "shots" are most interesting and even enlightening.

Perhaps the simplest explanation of the film is that used by the producers, "A Trip to Hollywood, with Alice White and Jack Mulhall as guides."

There is plenty of music and "Technicolour" has been used.

HIT THE DECK

PERHAPS the most obvious way of reviewing this picture would be to compare it with the original show produced on the stage of the "London Hippodrome," but such comparisons, even in the case of stage plays and film adaptions, are difficult to make.

Where it is a revue or, as in this case, a Musical Comedy under discussion the difficulty is greater and the result less profitable.

The plot is much the same, of course, but how much does the plot of a musical comedy matter anyway.

The rest of such a show must, necessarily, be handled in quite different ways for the stage and for the film. The spaces available are different, the acoustic arrangements are different and, in fact, everything is different.

In "Hit The Deck," a number of the old songs remain, "Sometimes I'm Happy, Sometimes I'm Blue," "Join the Navy," "Hallelujah" and others, while new songs include "Sez You, Sez Me," "Smithy" and "Keeping Myself Just for You."

Jack Walker and Polly Walker are the stars.

The Invisible Grip -that means safety

You are probably not aware that your Builder and Electrician have used Rawlplugs for hundreds of fixing jobs in your own home. That is because a Rawlplug is invisible once it is fixed. It grips the wall like a vice, holding the fixture firmly and permanently in position—yet it is invisible.

You also will find a hundred-and-one Rawlplug jobs in your home which you can do yourself. Anyone can use Rawlplugs successfully without previous experience.

Sold in complete outfits by all Ironmongers and Stores at 1/6, 3/6 and 5/6. Illustrated Literature free on request.

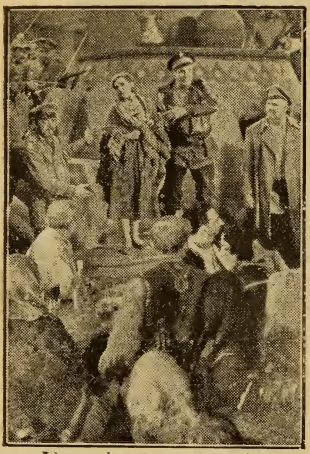
THE SONG OF THE FLAME



Alexander Gray, Bernice Claire and Noah Beery.

THE period during which the action takes place is the early stages of the "Red" revolution out of which modern Russia was born and the First National and Vitaphone people say that it was only made possible by the use of fifteen reels of old Rusian made film, some of it pre-revolution and the rest Soviet propaganda, all of which was utilised by the studio research staff as being true to life pictures of the changing Russia.

There is plenty of variety in "Song of the Flame," Technicolour, thrills and even song. Bernice Claire and Noah Beery lead the cast.

CAUGHT SHORT

TO anyone ignorant of Stock Market terms, the title is not illuminating and, with some millions of words available, these two, in combination, do not seem to be a happy choice.

It is strange that, with all the talent available and all the money spent on most films such a comparatively simple thing as a title is given, too often, so little consideration.

There was a time when English customs and phraseology was considered when titling and sub-titling the English bound editions of American films but, whether because it is thought that we like it, or whether it is that they don't bother, it seems that our transatlantic friends now send us the goods "as packed for the home market."

This picture is out of the ordinary in that the principal characters, both comedy rôles, are women.

Marie Dressler and Polly Moran are boarding house keepers, each with a leaning towards stock exchange gambling.

There is plenty of fun and a certain amount of love interest. The picture is worth seeing.

THE NIGHT WATCH

Seen at Queen's Hall, Cricklewood.

From Mrs. E. I. Brown,
68, Aberdare Gardens,
South Hampstead.

WHEN I went to the Cinema on Saturday I intended entering for this Competition and, with that end in view took it for granted that my choice would be "Around the Corner," the big Talkie of the programme.

The question of my liking or dislike for that picture does not arise, because a lesser film, and a silent one at that, left a far clearer impression on my mind, and it is therefore of "The Night Watch" that I shall write.

To pull the plot to pieces would not be very difficult, but then neither would it be particularly sensible, for even if one admits that there are a number of obvious improbabilities one can still say that the result is a good story well told.

I consider that the photography was good, more particularly in view of the fact that the action takes place almost entirely below decks in a battleship.

The interest, at least my interest, was sustained throughout, notwithstanding an entire lack of any comic relief.

The acting was excellent throughout and in fact it is impossible to single out one or other of the principle players for particular mention.

The types picked out to take the parts of the French Naval Officers and ratings are excellently chosen, and in fact, to me, as one who cannot really claim to know anything of French Warships, the whole picture was most convincing.

The story, while not a highly probably one, is at least not impossible, and it is not of many films, serious or comic, that one can say this.

SWEETHEARTS AND WIVES

CLIVE BROOK plays a rôle rather different to the usual hero's part, that of a Divorce detective.

Things may be different in America, and if this picture tells us the truth, such is the case, but the gentleman who, in this country, devotes his life and abilities to the digging out of facts to aid the divorce lawyer is seldom a romantic character and never an heroic one.

Billie Dove plays a part that calls for two changes, firstly from chambermaid to a lady of means and then to fiancée.

TIFFANIES CHIMPS

THIS week the first of a series of comedy shorts makes its appearance.

Here we print a picture of one of the gentlemen who will feature in "Tiffanies Chimps."

GIRL OF THE PORT

JAMIESON was, more or less, a shell shock case and, when the story opens he is seen, loafing in a South Sea Island tavern living up to his name, "Whisky Johnnie."

Enter into the picture a girl and a bully and we have the ingredients for a "Girl of the Port."

There are spectacle and some thrills in the film, the cast of which is led by Sally O'Neil and Reginald Sharland.

These stories, which have as a basis a fair maiden reforming the drunkard, are difficult to make convincing, but in this case it has been well done and is, in consequence, quite worth seeing.

OKLAHOMA CYCLONE

"A THIEF to catch a thief" is the theme of this film which is, quite unashamedly, a reversion to the "wide open spaces where men are men" and where, moreover, horses are horses tradition.

Bob Steele knocks out Al St. John.

The Gaumont people say that Hollywood has gone "Western" again and that now that the "avalanche of crime, back stage and vaudeville turns have ceased" there is a demand for outdoor talkies with the old thrills that made such films attractive in pre-talkie days.

There may be something in it, or there may not, but it is interesting to note that another wild west picture, "The Big Trail," is starting off in the West End this week.

COMMON CLAY

TAKEN from the play by Cleve Kinkhead, in which Jane Cowl scored a great stage success, "Common Clay" is a moving story of the unmarried mother. It is an intensive drama of modern life.

Constance Bennett plays the lead in the cast in this picture, which provides good entertainment.

The story, in book form, took a Harvard Prize, and in film form gives Constance Bennett full opportunity to develop her unique abilities. The chief male rôle is filled by Lewis Ayres, who was such an outstanding success in "All Quiet on the Western Front." His new part is quite different, but played with great conviction.

The plot concerns a beguiled woman's dramatic struggle to obtain a name for her baby and the human interest is sustained throughout.

The film deals effectively with the pathos and nobility of motherhood and is sure to appeal to the majority of filmgoers.

The supporting cast includes Tully Marshall, Beryl B. Mercer, Hale Hamilton and Purnell B. Pratt.

PRIZE-WINNING CRITICISM

Seen during week commencing 29th December, 1930, at Euston Cinema by Mr. Peter Donovan of 112 Station Road, Barnes, and awarded the prize for the best film criticism submitted. See page 3 for particulars of competition.

"SONG O' MY HEART"

THE "talkie" début of the famous tenor who "stars" in this very human story of the Emerald Isle is an unqualified success; but apart from the wide interest the event was bound to arouse, the story of "Song o' My Heart" is one to appeal to a very wide public.

With perfect photography, a delightful setting, and the rich brogue of the actors—even Alice Joyce subdues her American accent and conveys a very convincing study of the tragic Irish heroine—we have all the ingredients for first-class film entertainment, with just enough sentiment to tug at the heart strings, and the relief of delightful comedy between two of those old Irishmen who alternate between enmity and friendship with characteristic regularity..

We are given a picture of Irish village life, which (even if the influence of Hollywood is at times very obvious) cannot fail to stir the heart of all lovers of that in the film world which is true to life.

How different this clean, essentially human film from the sex-permeated stuff which is the fare we are so often compelled to digest at the cinema! And running through the whole is the lovely voice of McCormack, whose haunting singing of "Rose of Tralee" roused a little storm of applause—an unusual thing in the cinema.

It would be invidious to single out names, for in the long cast, from the villagers to the "stars," there is not a single artist who does not play perfectly and thus ensure success for what is truly a very fine film.

Peter Donovan.

STREET OF CHANCE

WILLIAM POWELL as "Natural Davis," a king of gamblers, has a very dramatic part in "Street of Chance." Forced to give up his wild gambling life in order to retain his wife's love he discovers that his young brother has also gambled and is in great trouble. He cures his brother by beating him in the biggest poker game the street of chance has ever seen, but is then shot by fellow gamblers who think he has "framed them." He dies on the way to hospital, after betting the ambulance attendant that he will not recover.

A Scene from the Paramount Picture: "STREET OF CHANCE."

Although essentially American in its setting and types this film has a strong human appeal and has many tense situations.

Jean Arthur, Kay Francis, Regis Toomey, and Stanley Fields are in the cast, and the picture will please those who like crime subjects.

SHIPS THAT PASS IN HOLLYWOOD

A PALATIAL ocean liner that never left dry land has navigated Hollywood. A battery of cameras did all the floating that was necessary. The ship occupied two huge stages at the United Artists studio and was built for special scenes for Douglas Fairbanks" new picture, "Reaching For The Moon," with Bebe Daniels.

There are three decks, luxurious cabins, a steerage, life boats, and all the paraphernalia that a real sea-going vessel would require.

The cast of "Reaching For The Moon" includes Edward Everett Horton, Jack Mulhall, June MacCloy, Claud Allister, Kate Price, Emmett Corrigan, Helen Jerome Eddy, Adrienne d'Ambricourt, Walter Walker and Luana Walters.

RECAPTURED LOVE

THIS picture, in common with so many, has a plot written round a divorce. Belle Bennett plays the wife and John Halliday the husband.

These divorce films are, more often than not, entirely false to life and quite unconvincing but whether it is the story, taken from the play "Misdeal," by Basil Woon, or the combined work of the director and the cast, this one lives and is real. This, also, despite the lavish display of night club and cabaret.

A Night Club Scene from "Recaptured Love."

ROAD TO PARADISE

THIS is a novel form of crook melodrama, featuring Loretta Young and Jack Mulhall. Loretta Young plays two parts. One is that of Mary Brennan, of the underworld, and the other of Margaret Waring, an heiress débutante, whom Mary very strongly resembles.

The director has made an admirable attempt to make a rather improbable story live and has succeeded in turning out an enjoyable picture. It tells of two sisters, who live in very different worlds, and the film becomes intensely dramatic when the twins change places. It also has a good love interest and many tense moments.

SWING HIGH

HERE is an ideal film for those who like a circus setting with plenty of thrills and a love interest without a very original plot. Obviously a great deal of money has been spent on this production and no fewer than sixteen stars appear, including Helen Twelvetrees, Fred Scott, Dorothy Burgess, Daphne Pollard, George Fawcett and Stephin Fetchit.

Several song hits are included in the show and humour is provided by Stephin Fetchit with his dancing camel. The general appeal of the film, however, is romantic. It has a very dramatic climax in the circus itself. This film is certainly good entertainment.

Outside the Caravan in "Swing High."

STRICTLY UNCONVENTIONAL

IT is a joy to see and hear this picture. Somerset Maughan wrote "The Circle," from which it was taken, and Maughan has not been spoiled in the adaptation.

It is the satirist Maughan that is put upon the screen and a satirical comedy that is played for us by Catherine Dale Owen, Paul Cavanagh, Lewis Stone and Ernest Torrence.

The dialogue and characterisations are exceptionally well done and there is plenty of real humour.

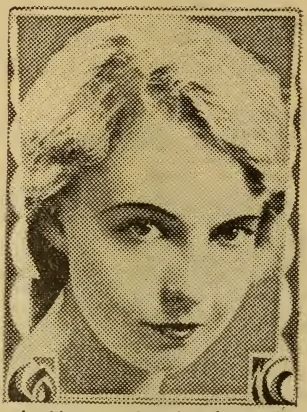
ONE ROMANTIC NIGHT

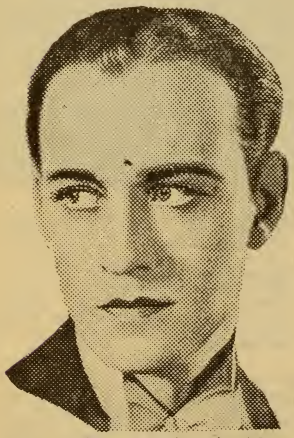
THIS picture is played by an amazingly brilliant cast that includes Lillian Gish, Rod La Rocque, Conrad Nagel, Marie Dressler and O. P. Heggie, which fact alone should appeal to many of our readers. The film is full of lavish spectacles, dramatic moments and romantic situations.

The story is an adaptation of Ferenc Molnar's play "The Swan," seen on the stage in London, quite recently, at St. James' Theatre and is "Ruritanian" in nature.

We all know what that means. Romance built round handsome and beautiful princes and princesses with a virtuous commoner thrown in, the whole liberally sprinkled with colonels and counts and served, if possible, with music.



Lillian Gish star of "One Romantic Night"



Conrad Nagel featured in "One Romantic Night" starring Lillian Gish

Let it be understood that this galaxy of stars is by no means wasted in an inadequate play. The picture is a good one, as convincing as such a story can be, directed and played very well indeed.

Lillian Gish has a freshness that is not common among the goddesses of Hollywood. Conrad Nagel and Rod la Rocque look and play their parts excellently well. O. P. Heggie makes a splendid and knowing "Father Benedict" and Marie Dressler again gives of her genius.

THE BLUE ANGEL

EMIL JANNINGS and Marlene Dietrich have scored an immense artistic success in their first Ufa-Tone drama, entitled "The Blue Angel."

This great German talkie may strike many as being sordid in its theme, but the acting and production are worthy of the highest praise. It should be seen by every true lover of the drama.

Jannings plays the part of a German professor whose unruly pupils go nightly to "The Blue Angel" cabaret where the beautiful Lola is the chief attraction. The vamping, irresistable Lola is played brilliantly by Marlene Dietrich. The professor comes under her influence, and marries her. Tiring, however, of her too respectable husband she returns to her profession.

The rest of the film portrays in an intensely dramatic and convincing manner the downfall of the pathetic old man. His death at the end does not provide the usual film happy ending, but the picture will appeal to thousands of the more serious filmgoers for this very reason, apart from the masterly acting by Jannings and the perfect direction by Joseph Sternberg.

"The Blue Angel" is to be seen in the West End this week.

Kinemas of Interest.

THE NEW EMPIRE

LEICESTER SQUARE, W.1.

THE luxurious New Empire, which in the opinion of many is the world's most beautiful picture theatre, stands on a site that has for centuries been of considerable historical and romantic interest.

Originally a tilt yard where knightly tournaments were held, the site was utilised by the Earl of Leicester in 1630 for building a palatial residence known as Leicester House. Here the children of Charles the First stayed for some time, to be followed later by the Queen of Bohemia who died there in 1662.

Another distinguished occupier of Leicester House was Colbert, the French Ambassador, and it was here that he was visited by the famous diarist Pepys.

After a period of occupation by Prince Eugene, the historic house was taken by George, Prince of Wales, who set up there an opposition court to his father, George the First. At this time Addison's "Cato" was performed in the house with Prince George himself as "Portuis." When the Prince became king his son followed his footsteps and maintained a special court of his own. Thus did Leicester House become known as "The Pouting Place of Princes."

George the Third was proclaimed king there but after this event the mansion seems to have been deserted by royalty as a residence and Sir Ashton Lever acquired it for his notable Museum.

In 1884 a theatre was built on the site and opened as "The Empire" with a piece entitled "Chilperic" by H. B. Farnie. Herbert Standing was in the title rôle and many well-known British and Continental artistes were in the cast.

The promenade of the Empire became one of the most popular meeting-places in London and the theatre had hundreds of very distinguished patrons. It was on the Empire promenade, by the way, that the first and one of the most dramatic suffragette demonstrations occurred. How much has happened since those stormy days and how much more freedom women have gained!

Many splendid ballets and first-class variety turns appeared on the stage of the Empire, but the coming of revue led to a decline in the popularity of the music-hall. Then came the moving picture which swept all before it and led to the acquiring of the old Empire site as a super cinema. It is interesting to note in this connection that the firm associated with the first showing of films at the Empire was Goldwyn, which now forms part of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation, the present enterprising owners of the theatre. It is the latter who established at the Empire the first noon to midnight film entertainment that London has had.

The last stage performance given at the old Empire was "Lady Be Good." The new and even more comfortable house opened with an outstanding film version of "Trelawny of the Wells" and two members of the original play cast were present at that memorable first-night of the cinema. These were the Earl of Rosslyn and Aubrey Fitzgerald. What memories they must have had of the old building!

Maurice Devereux.

"LOOSE ENDS"

DRAMATIC BRITISH TALKING FILM.

Adrianne Allen, who plays in "Loose Ends," with Edna Best and Owen Nares.

THE British film version of the stage play of "Loose Ends" by Dion Titheradge should prove very popular, particularly as the cast includes such well-known British stars as Owen Nares, Edna Best, Miles Mander, Adrianne Allen, Donald Calthrop and J. Fisher White.

Owen Nares, as Malcolm Forres, plays the part of the embittered down-and-out who is knocked down by the car of an ultra-modern actress. A love affair develops and they marry. Disaster comes however, when it is revealed that Malcolm Forres has previously served a long term in prison for the murder of the betrayer of his sister.

Divorce looms ahead and the disillusioned Malcolm drifts back to the hopeless state in which his wife found him. Despite what the world may say, however, she eventually returns to him and together they face a happier future.

This film is the first big talkie in which Owen Nares has appeared and the London settings will also make a special appeal to English audiences. From the dramatic standpoint "Loose Ends" is powerful and moving. Captain Norman Walker has directed this picture, which gives the splendid cast good scope to display their abilities.

It is also refreshing to hear well-recorded English voices.

"THE DIVORCEE"

ALTHOUGH this film deals with the well worn theme of divorce it is worth seeing and is well played by a strong cast. Norma Shearer fills the rôle of Jerry, a wife who, discovering her husband's unfaithfulness, determines to follow his example and go her own way. Conrad Nagel portrays Paul, the man who wishes to leave his own invalid wife and marry the embittered Jerry. She agrees but, learning how much Paul means to his own wife, at the last minute she sends him away and goes abroad.

In Paris she finds her former husband leading a wild but unhappy life, and her love for him reviving, they are reconciled in a very dramatic scene. The husband is ably played by Chester Morris, while others in the cast include Robert Montgomery and Florence Eldridge. The photography is excellent.

Norma Shearer and Chester Morris in a dramatic scene from "The Divorcee," which is generally released this week.

While every possible care has been taken to ensure accuracy in the programmes, the publishers cannot hold themselves responsible for any errors or omissions.

"KISMET"

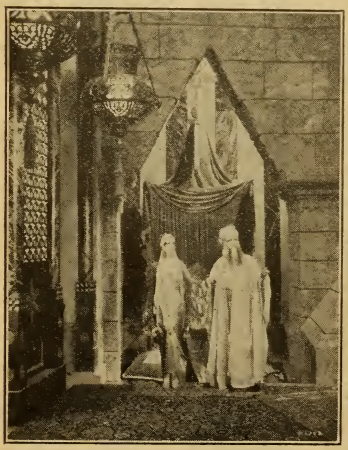
BAGHDAD! City of splendid palaces and indescribable hovels; home of passionate love and hate; place of intrigue! One's imagination leaps to the thought of the boundless possibilities the city of old has for that searchlight of life—the cinema.

And in "Kismet" the imagination may run riot. For we have the sumptuous scenes of mosque, palace, and harem; the crowded bazaar, with its teeming human throngs; the loves and hatreds of Caliph and beggar, harem favourite and ousted one. Through all the scenes of Oriental splendour runs the clear-cut plot, which is, almost miraculously, never made subserviant to the spectacle.

We follow the fortunes of Hajj, the lovable rascal so triumphantly portrayed by Otis Skinner, as he emerges from the obscurity of a beggar to become a man of wealth and power; and having seen his daughter (Loretta Young) about to celebrate her wedding to the Caliph (David Manners), he sinks once more to the begging-stone by his beloved mosque, and in his rags raises the old cry of "Alms! Alms for the love of Allah!"



A scene from "Kismet," the spectacular film of the East.

The whole production is magnificently mounted. The appeal of the plot and the almost overpowering beauty of the spectacular make a harmonious blending. The voices of the actors are pleasing. The grouping is a triumph of the modern producer's art; and if, at the end of it all, one is tempted to ask, "Could this be true to life?" there is always the consoling thought that art is the mistress of all things in the cinema. But what a benevolent mistress she is revealed to be in this, one of the most beautiful things we, personally, have seen for some time.

Hoot Gibson in "Spurs."

"SPURS"

HERE is a wild West film of the old popular kind with thrills and action in plenty.

Hoot Gibson as Bob Merrill gives some splendid displays of daring riding, while a romantic interest is provided by the love affair between Bob and Peggy Bradley.

A battle with bandits and a murderer's confession are two of the most dramatic incidents, and at the end Bob not only wins the prize in a riding contest but Peggy as well.

NEWS OF THE STARS

MARY PICKFORD has just completed "Kiki," based on the play by Belasco. Reginald Denny will be in the same show, which includes some striking cabaret scenes.

LOUISE FAZENDA, who is to feature in the forthcoming release of "Lady of the Rose," recently returned to New York and will shortly appear in a Spanish-speaking film. She has also been offered a part in a London musical comedy.

ERNEST TORRENCE forsakes his usual part of a villain in his new film "Speedway" in which he has the rôle of an amiable old racing driver.

LORETTA YOUNG, who is only seventen years of age, has signed a contract in which it is specified that she must have at least fifty-six hours of sleep each week! This is the first such contract on record and the stipulation above has been made to preserve the star's health. Loretta says she can't sleep unless she is wearing blue material!

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS is making a tour of the East. During his trip he will do some big game hunting in China and India, as well as visiting the buried city of Angkor.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS spent most of his leisure after making "The Dawn Patrol" in wheeling his little daughter up and down the street in which he lives.

JOE E. BROWN, the comedian with the large mouth, possesses no less than a dozen gramophones—each with a pet name!

RONALD COLEMAN recently adopted a stray wire-haired terrier and the dog appears in his new film "The Devil to Pay."

"SIN FLOOD"

"SIN FLOOD" has both a psychological and romantic interest. Its main theme concerns the reactions in the face of death of various individuals in a group composed of people of many different classes and temperaments, including a street evangelist, a showgirl, a broker's clerk and some actors, society folk and tramps.

Trapped in an underground bar during a Mississipi flood they are completely cut off from the outside world. The water is kept out by steel doors but the supply of air is rapidly diminishing.

After every one has revealed their true nature and a common bond has been established, they decide to end the suspense by opening the doors. We will not reveal what happens when this is done but it will provide a surprise for many filmgoers.

The love affair between the showgirl and the young clerk provides a romantic interest that is really subsidiary. The cast includes Douglas Fairbanks, Junr., Dorothy Revier and Noah Beery.

"LADIES OF LEISURE"

THIS talking film is adapted from the stage play by David Belasco, and gives Barbara Stanwyck and Ralph Graves a good opportunity to develop their acting abilities.

The story tells of a young artist who sees more in one of his models than appears on the surface. The boy's father objects to the girl for social reasons and rather than ruin her lover's future she decides to go to Havana with an admirer. As the boat leaves, however, remorse at deserting the man who loves her makes her attempt suicide by jumping overboard. She is saved at the last minute, and the artist hearing of her action realises her great love for him and rushes to the hospital where she has been taken. Here they are happily re-united.

The "G" Sisters in "Recaptured Love," to be seen this week.

Sue Carol & Eddie Phillips in "Dancing Sweeties" an amusing film which is at several suburban halls.

"PERSONALITY"

AN amusing comedy, well-played, that makes an excellent light film.

Johnny Arthur plays the rôle of an ambitious salesman who marries Lil Morse (Sally Starr). Becoming too ambitious he gets into trouble and is sacked by his firm after having established himself and Lil in a luxurious flat.

Lil and her husband become estranged, but later the salesman's luck turns and, thanks to his bluff, he is offered a large salary by his old company to return to their service.

The film should appeal particularly to those who like domestic and business themes on the films. The adventures of the bluffing salesman provide plenty of humour.

"A ROMANCE OF SEVILLE"

THIS all-colour and sound film is a British production, starring beautiful Marguerite Allen and handsome Alexandre D'Arcy. The settings are genuinely Spanish, while the soldier and fiesta scenes have actual Spanish crowds. The story is slight and not very original but lends itself to spectacular and colourful treatment. The main thrills are provided by the abduction of an attractive heiress and her sensationol rescue from a bandit chief by her lover, aided by a troop of cavalry. Spanish songs and dances do much to further the romantic and picturesque elements of this picture and it is good fare for those who like light entertainment with convincing local atmosphere and appropriate music. The delightful glimpses of Spanish beauty spots are alone worth seeing.

A Scene from the British colour film, "A Romance of Seville."

THE GLASS HOUSE

PEOPLE in glass houses can't throw stones, so it looks very much as if there would be no more stone throwing in Hollywood.

This is, if the modes and creations of some of filmdom's most pretentious motion pictures are any criterion, for practically everything but the kitchen sink is made of glass in the screen drama, "Our Modern Maidens," Joan Crawford's latest starring vehicle.

Imagine, if you can, alighting from a glass trimmed bed, looking into an exquisite cut-glass bordered mirror, over perhaps a dozen glass images of dogs, dolls, reading lamps and flowers. But that is precisely what takes place in this latest of ultra-modern pictures, for even the floor has various panels of heavy mirror-backed glass.

PRIZE-WINNING CRITICISM

Seen during week commencing 5th January, 1931, at the Empire, Streatham, by Miss Margerie Yeates, 15, Pembroke Gardens, W.8, and awarded the prize for the best film criticism submitted. See page 3 for particulars of competition.

"IN GAY MADRID"

"IN GAY MADRID" is a romantic talkie of Spanish love, in which Ramon Novarro and Dorothy Jordan play the leading parts. I had never before heard Ramon Novarro in a talkie and, as he had always been my favourite film star in silent films, I was looking forward to seeing "In Gay Madrid." Nor was I disappointed, for he spoke and sung in such a natural way that he might have been present in the flesh. The first part of the story of the film took place in Madrid and the latter part, ten miles outside the city.

There was plenty of seranading and passionate love-making upon balconies and in moonlit gardens; also a very beautiful ballroom scene, where the Spanish Tango was danced to perfection. There were many touches of humour in the story and one very amusing incident occurred when Ricardo (Ramon Novarro) pushed Octavio (Herbert Clark), attired as Monsieur Beaucaire, into the fountain in the garden outside the ballroom.

The one mistake which I think slightly marred an otherwise good film was the unnaturally speedy recovery of Ricardo from the wound received during his duel with Octavio.

Margerie Yeates.

NEW SOUND PICTURE OF THE JUNGLE

"AFRICA SPEAKS," which will be shown shortly, is one of the most interesting jungle pictures yet screened. Paul Hoefler was commissioned by the Colorado African Expedition to make a talking picture record of his African adventures, which occupied the best part of two years. Starting at Lagos, with two heavy trucks and tons of equipment, he crossed equatorial Africa from ocean to ocean, which, including detours, was 14,000 miles. He made 100,000 feet of film, and "Africa Speaks" is the pictorial harvest of his journey. It is, at once, a living transcript of the beauties and the horrors of the jungle.

In one of the many splendid nature scenes we see a plague of millions of locusts—swarming through the air, literally clouding the skies. Other scenes show a lion-kill and a parade of giraffes. This film will undoubtedly delight those who like open-air films of real interest.

JOHN GILBERT'S "CHUCK-WAGON"

WHEN a motion picture company goes out on "location" with dozens of technical men, assistant directors and "extras," who must all be taken care of at luncheon time and often dinner time and breakfast time as well, in wild, open country far from stores and supply stations of any kind, the service problem in spite of the seeming handicaps, is a comparatively simple one.

It is generally solved by taking as many as are necessary of the handy but somewhat monotonous "box-lunches," ready packed in cartons by catering companies and several cases of bottled milk. These are rapidly served and disposed of with no work or trouble about dishes, cups, table wear, dish-washing and the rest of the ordinary culinary cares of feeding scores of people.

But with the John Gilbert troupe, which spent many days in desolate country during the filming of the star's latest picture "Desert Nights," there were no such prosaic meals. Gilbert believes in real food served to people under conditions as favourable and comfortable as the open spaces will permit, and so he took with him, when his company made the difficult desert scenes, which furnish so much of the plot of the picture, a "chuck wagon."

A movie "chuck wagon" is an elaboration of the type seen on the western ranges during round-up time and made use of on other occasions when a great number of people must be fed in out of the way places. It is mounted on an automobile chassis and fully equipped with all the utensils for open-air cooking, as well as a plentiful supply of staple cooked, tinned and fresh foods which is frequently replenished from the nearest town.

An experienced chef travelled with the Gilbert company who was fully prepared to cook any order that might come from any member of the cast or company. Mr. Gilbert's specially prepared lamb chops and sandwiches were the most popular items on the bill of fare.

This excellent eating system is credited by Director William Nigh for the refreshing and delightful harmony that was so evident during the trying conditions that were necessary in filming the parching desert scenes when the cast had to endure nerve-racking sand storms and hours spent in the glaring white dazzle of the desert.

"THE BAD ONE"

THIS is the story of a Spanish girl and of an American sailor who falls in love with her in the dock district of Marseilles.

Dolores del Rio as Lita, the girl, and Edmund Lowe as Jerry, the sailor, are the stars of this romantic film and go through many stirring scenes.

Jerry gets into trouble at Marseilles and is sentenced to ten years at an island prison. He erroneously thinks Lita is the cause of his arrest.

A revolt occurs at the prison and Jerry takes the lead. He is shot in the ensuing fight after dramatically and unintentionally destroying with dynamite a bridge which is the prisoners' sole means of escape. Some good fighting scenes occur in this part of the film.

Lita nurses Jerry back to consciousness and he is pardoned on the grounds that he brought about the end of the mutiny.

This is perhaps not very convincing as a story but the film has strong dramatic and romantic interest with plenty of action.

Dolores del Rio and Edmund Lowe in "The Bad One."

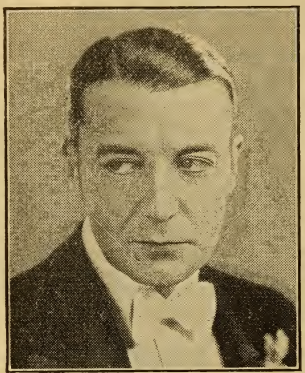
"SLIGHTLY SCARLET"



Clive Brook, who plays in "Slightly Scarlet."

THIS is a crook drama with adventurous and romantic interest. Evelyn Brent and Clive Brook, who made such a hit in "Interference," are the stars in this new film.

Supported by a good cast, Evelyn Brent gives a striking performance as Lucy Stavrin, an American girl in Paris, who is in the power of a gang of international thieves. In order to obtain a pearl necklace from a millionaire's wife the girl is forced to pose as a countess and is invited to stay at the Riviera Villa of the very woman she is to rob.

There she meets an Englishman (Clive Brook) who had previously fallen in love with her in Paris. One night, just as Lucy has substituted a false necklace for the real article, she encounters her English admirer and discovers that he too is after the necklace.

Very much in love with each other they decide to put back the pearls and go "straight" together in future. They are interrupted however, by the chief of the crook gang and a violent struggle ensues in which the latter is killed.

Although filmgoers must be growing tired of films in which attractive crooks suddenly reform they will find many tense moments and plenty of action in "Slightly Scarlet," which is to be recommended as a well-acted crime drama.

Evelyn Brent also has a big part in "Slightly Scarlet."

Many Tests for Colour Films

ONE of the most exacting duties that has to be performed by motion picture directors prior to the shooting of the film is that of testing the players for Technicolour productions. Altogether six screen tests are made, where one had sufficed previously.

When the film "Song of the Flame," starring Bernice Claire and Alexander Gray was in production, all the featured players had to go through the following tests for the making of this picture:—

1. Colour photography test.
2. Make-up test.
3. Costume test.
4. Sound and film test of talking voice.
5. Sound and film test of singing voice.
6. Harmony test for all duets.

It will thus be realised that since there are altogether some dozen principals in the big cast, the job was no easy one.

Apart from these tests for the stars there were general musical and singing tests. Some with and some without cameras. A huge mass chorus, various smaller groups of singers, Russian and mixed choruses, dancing choruses, café singers, villagers singing folk songs, balalaika orchestras, regular orchestras, and various incidental musicians received tests prior to the shooting. Also included are tests of the various pigeons, geese and other animals seen in this picture, and tests of the sounds made by wax cobble stones to be thrown in a mob scene. Twenty-two roosters were tested to find one whose crow best suited the microphone!

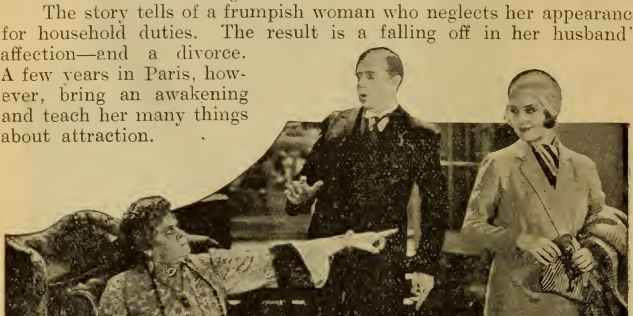
"Wings of Adventure" has many such dramatic moments as this. Rex Lease is the Star and provides many thrills.

"LET US BE GAY"

THIS is Norma Shearer's fifth talking picture and certainly one of the most entertaining of them all, particularly as she is so brilliantly supported by Marie Dressler.

The theme of divorce has been rather overdone in recent films but the clever direction and outstanding acting of this production make it well worth seeing.

The story tells of a frumpish woman who neglects her appearance for household duties. The result is a falling off in her husband's affection—and a divorce. A few years in Paris, however, bring an awakening and teach her many things about attraction.



Marie Dressler and Norma Shearer in an amusing scene from "Let Us Be Gay."

A wealthy dowager persuades her to vamp a man who is becoming too friendly with her grand-daughter and it is when the wife discovers that it is her own ex-husband whom she is expected to fascinate that the comedy becomes really amusing and full of amazing situations.

Marie Dressler gives a superb portrayal of the dowager who refuses to be old and Rod La Rocque ably plays the part of the husband.

PRIZE-WINNING CRITICISM

Seen during week commencing 12th January. 1931, at Tussard's Cinema, by Miss Clodagh Finlay. 25, Dalebury Road, S.W.17. and awarded the prize for the best film criticism submitted. See page 3 for particulars of competition.

"STREET OF CHANCE"

HERE, in a film that should rank high among recent presentations, William Powell has proved that he can play a part far removed from the particular (and not too pleasant) rôles with which he has hitherto been associated.

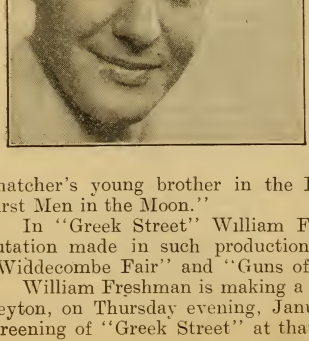
As an inveterate gambler whose wife (after many futile attempts to cure him) is giving him a final opportunity to abandon his vice, he reveals a sense of real drama which is sustained to the end of the picture. We follow with a vivid interest the fortunes of the gambler who, in order to save his brother from becoming a like victim, commits the one "crooked" act of his life—and pays the penalty.

Here is a realistic picture of New York's street life; the photography is excellent; the dialogue (if at times a little drowned by street noises) holds one's attention. The players are one and all a clever crowd of people—but the success of the whole is undoubtedly due to the brilliant, human, dominant acting of William Powell.

"Street of Chance" is a good picture that definitely establishes all concerned as artistes of the front rank.

CLODAGH FINLAY.

FROM CALL-BOY TO FILM STAR



WILLIAM FRESHMAN, who is fast becoming one of the most popular British stars, will be seen this week at most of the leading cinemas in his latest talking and singing film "Greek Street," a story of London's Italian quarter.

"Bill" commenced his career as call-boy at the famous British film studios at Shepherd's Bush and rose progressively to his present place in film-land. His first screen appearance was in a series of boxing pictures, and his initial real part was as Heather Thatcher's young brother in the H. G. Wells silent picture "The First Men in the Moon."

In "Greek Street" William Freshman enhances a big film reputation made in such productions as "The Luck of the Navy," "Widdecombe Fair" and "Guns of Loos."

William Freshman is making a personal appearance at the Savoy, Leyton, on Thursday evening, January 29th, in connection with the screening of "Greek Street" at that theatre.

(Opposite the Historical "Bricklayers' Arms").

THE comfortable cinema known as the Old Kent Picture House is situated at the junction of Old and New Kent Roads, one of the most interesting corners of London, south of the Thames.

Being opposite the Bricklayers' Arms, this site has always been associated with that famous hostelry, and early records show that a well was once situated here where travellers to London stopped to water or change their horses when calling at the inn. Later the same site became one of the largest horse omnibus yards in the metropolis, and many of the picturesque "knifeboard" vehicles set out from here. The Old Kent Road, once part of the old Pilgrim's Way, has always been, in fact, one of the main highways into London and for many years Royal and Illustrious travellers made the Bricklayers' Arms a special halting place for ceremonial entrances to the capital. A special railway station was erected later for the reception of distinguished visitors, and here Prince Albert was received when he first visited Queen Victoria. The Emperor Napoleon and the Empress Eugenie also alighted from the train at this spot, when paying a state visit at the time of the Crimean War.

THE OLD INN, however, gave shelter to many celebrities long before the days of the Crimea. In Edward III's reign, the Burgundian knights who came over after the battle of Cressy to challenge the English nobility to a tournament at Smithfield, lodged at the first Bricklayers' Arms. A century later, Warwick the Kingmaker, stayed here before going to France to ask the hand of the French King's sister for Edward IV, and during the reign of Henry VIII, Anne of Cleves remained in the inn while her portrait was sent to that monarch for his approval.

NELSON, returning triumphant from the Nile, halted here, and other famous admirals who received hospitality at the inn, were Drake, Duncan (Lord Camperdown), Sir Cloudesley Shovel, and Lord Hood.

During excavations in this district some years ago, deer antlers, ancient coins, and actual traces of the original inn's foundations were discovered, proving the antiquity of the site.

The cinema, which stands in this historical quarter to-day, is one of the most up-to-date in London, and is equipped with a very efficient air washing apparatus which, in conjunction with a powerful cyclonic fan fills the building with purified air and draws out the stale atmosphere. In 1926, the roof was lifted 14 ft. in one piece without removing a single slate. This was a remarkable undertaking, as the roof has a span of 84 ft. The reconstructed building holds 2,000 people, and is one of the most attractive entertainment houses in this populous and busy area.

"NIGHT WORK"

AN entertaining film of a young window-dresser (Eddie Quillan), who is persuaded by the charms of an attractive nurse (Sally Starr) to adopt a little child at an orphanage.

Falling in love with the nurse, the young man takes on extra work as a waiter in a night club so as to support the child. He tells the nurse, however, that he is an oil magnate.

A millionaire claims the child and in desperation the young lover consults the orphanage records—with a surprising result. The ending is a happy one and the theme of the story one that will make a wide appeal. The film contains many really amusing and pleasing incidents and provides good light fare for cinema-goers.

The cast is adequate and the plot rather out of the ordinary, with a special attraction for lovers of children.

Eddie Quillan and Sally Starr make a delightful comedy couple.

INTRODUCING 'BOB'

FILMGOERS this week will have the opportunity of meeting yet another screen doggie favourite. Rin Tin Tin made his final bow—and bark in "Rough Waters," but "Bob" will do much to consol us for the loss in "Scrags," which tells the tale of a mongrel. Augusto Sandoni, the dog's owner, appears in the sympathetic rôle of old tramp who is "Scrags's" partner. The story is both moving and amusing with plenty of canine interest, making the film a pleasant change over the more conventional fare.

WHEN THE "STARS" WEEP

HOW HOLLYWOOD FAVOURITES CREATE TEARS.

"THERE'S a tear for every smile in Hollywood" is an old one, but how is this tear business done? The popular myths of glycerine and onion juice have long been exploded. Long, long ago, when the close-up came into being, the practice was to edge the powdery vapour of glycerine towards a sniffing actress. Often the vapour was visible, and always there were unpleasant after-effects, sometimes seriously impairing the eyesight of an actress. The onion story is fictitious, of course.

Nowadays, artificial agencies for procuring tears are dispensed with in all studios. All the popular actresses produce tears from within themselves; although their methods vary.

Loretta Young, for instance, who is starring in "Kismet" with Otis Skinner, called upon quite often to support a climax with a bucketful of sobs and sniffles, finds that nothing more is necessary than the heartbreaks in the situation itself. That is, she finds out the situations demanding the tears, the predicament into which the scenario writer has thrust her, and imagination does the rest.

Lila Lee, who stars in "Murder Will Out," has a stock scheme which she declares is remarkably effective. Having been brought up in close contact with her mother, she has developed what may be termed an abnormal affection for her parent. For sequences demanding tears she has merely to think of her mother being ill, and she cries spontaneously.

BERNICE CLAIRE, whose charm and grace have been seen in such pictures as "No No Nanette," "Song of the Flame," and "Numbered Men," finds tears the least bit provoking. Wild and hysterical scenes she finds easy. In less emotional moments, she simply works up to the moment gradually, even whilst she is acting quite tear-lessly. What Miss Claire finds most difficult is the shot calling for an uninterrupted close-up of a player changing from one mood to a lacrymose one, without benefit of hysterics.

Marilyn Miller, who won such a great reception in "Sally," and whose newest production is "Sunny," has one of the most enervating methods of them all. It reminds her of a tragically sad incident, but serves to bring the necessary pearls of dew to her eyes. On the day of her graduation at school she and her friend, a sixteen year old boy with whom she was desperately in love, were walking to their final session at school. About half a mile from the college was a rifle and pistol range.

Although Miss Miller claims that she heard no shot, an agonized gasp at her side told her that her friend had been hit.

All Marilyn could do was to scream, and even before he had died, she had fainted. Even referring to the incident depresses Miss Miller for the whole day, and for this reason it is fortunate that she does not have to cry very often in her life—rarely indeed for screen purposes, anyway.

Charming Vivienne Segal is the bride in "The Lady of the Rose."

"THE LADY of the ROSE"

A ROMANTIC COMEDY IN COLOUR.

LOVERS of musical comedy should find much to delight them in the magnificently produced film adaptation of "The Lady of the Rose," which was so successful as a play at Daly's Theatre, London.

The plot concerns an Italian Count, who is forced to flee from the Austrians on his wedding day, leaving his beautiful bride to the ardent attentions of a handsome colonel of the invading forces. A picture of an ancestress of the bride is traditionally supposed to protect the honour of the women of the house and it does so in this case, giving the producer an effective climax for the romance and drama of the story.

A striking cast has been chosen to play this popular plot and the stars have been specially selected for their vocal abilities. Walter Pidgeon, a Canadian by birth, has the rôle of the dashing Austrian Colonel, Vivienne Segal is the bride, and Allan Prior, the Italian Count. Humour to blend with the romantic element is supplied by those reliable artistes, Louise Fazenda, Lupino Lane and Ford Sterling. Myrna Loy is première danseuse. The settings are appropriately elaborate and the whole production should not disappoint those who look to the films for romance rather than reality. M. D.

"RENEGADES"

Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy in a scene from "Renegades."

HERE is a rather unusual film drama which revolves about the personalities of four adventurers, privates in the Legion and sworn comrades, one of whom had been previously betrayed by an alluring woman spy.

During their decoration for bravery in action by the Minister of War, at Casablanca, the leader of the four friends sees the woman who had betrayed him.

Hoping to prevent any recurrence of her deadly activities, he siezes her by the throat, but the arrival of his captain interrupts him and the four are engaged in a desperate battle with native police but are forced to flee Later, the friends abduct the woman from her hotel and take her with them to the Arabs. How the four renegades find themselves opposed to their former comrades when the Arabs attack a lonely outpost, and the woman, bitterly trying to avenge herself, turns a machine gun on them, forms the dramatic climax to this picture. Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy and Noah Beery give excellent performances.

"THE UNHOLY THREE"

LON CHANEY, who died so tragically while at the very peak of film fame, has given us a most remarkable performance in his only talking picture, "The Unholy Three." As a sinister ventriloquist, the great screen artist imitates five different voices and he plays the parts of two very contrasting characters, one of which is an old woman who keeps a bird shop.

Drama and Shadows in "The Unholy Three."

The ventriloquist is involved in a highly ingenious robbery plot with a circus midget and a giant, aided by a girl named Rosie. The latter complicates matters by falling in love with a clerk who knows nothing of the trio's activities and of whom the scheming ventriloquist is madly jealous. Lila Lee and Elliott Nugent are the young lovers.

The film is extremely melodramtic and packed with genuine thrills, some of the most startling of which are provided by a huge ape, which eventually kills the giant. There is also a powerful court scene in which Lon Chaney is given ample opportunity to display his amazing gifts of vocal and facial expression.

Few of those who see "The Unholy Three" are likely to be unimpressed by the exceptionally weird and dramatic atmosphere of the film.

EVELYN BRENT IN MELODRAMA

THE lurid old Barbary Coast of San Francisco has passed away—its glamour and its lawlessness have fallen before the Law. Sailors from the four corners of the earth, pleasure bent with cut-throat looks, are seen no longer. It was the most evil set of slum and scum the United States could muster and in that old time tragic corner, W. B. Maxwell has set his story of the "Ragged Messenger," and the talking picture version of which has been titled "Madonna of The Streets."

Evelyn Brent, the emotional actress, has been chosen for the title rôle of this saga of love and reformation, which deals with the machinations of a woman who wants to wrest a legacy from the nephew of a man she lived with. To achieve her ends she becomes a missionary assistant—and Fate takes its own course with her.

An important cast supports Evelyn Brent, her leading man being Robert Ames of "The Trespasser" fame, Josephine Dunn, Ivan Linow, J. Edwards Davies and Ed. Brady. John Robertson, one of filmdom's leading directors, was in charge of the production. "Madonna of the Streets" will shortly be seen at a West End theatre.

Winnie Lightner is a great hit in "The Life of the Party."

The St. James' Picture Theatre

(Palace Street, Buckingham Palace Road, S.W.1.)

LINKS WITH ROMAN LONDON.

ONE of London's most elegant and luxurious cinemas is the St. James' Picture Theatre. It was built as a Society Picture Theatre, with a Board of directors that included several names prominent in public life and society. Members of the Royal Family have been among the hundreds of distinguished patrons of this theatre, and it is quite independent of any of the big combines.

The St. James' Picture Theatre was erected on the site of the eighteenth-century St. Peter's Chapel of Ease. It is interesting to record that during the excavations for the foundations, it was found that the Chapel stood on re-claimed land, and an old Roman aqueduct was discovered. This brings us back to the days when the Thames spread over the neighbourhood, but a link with an even more remote period was found in the shape of two Roman bricks, red and beautifully burnt, which were unearthed six feet below the vaults. Pieces of pottery, black-glazed on both sides, which were possibly portions of a cup, were also brought to light. The bricks are of the type used by the Ancient Romans in building walls and suggest that there was an old Roman road leading to "Londinium" across the marshy overflow of the Thames. There were undoubted deposits of river mud below the vaults.

It is fascinating to think that Roman Galleys once disembarked their warriors and Caesar's legions tramped to battle, at a spot where now a modern picture theatre stands!

The Chapel of Ease was built in the middle of the eighteenth century, partly on the strength of a £1,000 lottery prize that had been won by the infamous Dr. Dodd.

Dodd was an eloquent preacher and attracted large and fashionable congregations to the Chapel that stood in the middle of some market gardens. Money did not come in quickly enough, and so Dodd forged the name of Lord Chesterfield for over £4,000, later paying the penalty of his crime at Tyburn, where he was hanged!

Nearly £100,000 was spent on constructing and equipping the present cinema, which took seven years to complete. The building is imposing and dignified, whilst the interior is admirably planned, with a view to perfect screen-sight from every part of the auditorium. Ventilation is secured by the latest plenum system, which draws air in, and after being filtered, washed, and warmed is forced into the auditorium from the ceiling downwards, and finally expels it by means of other fans at a lower level, and ensures that "Breath of fresh air," which is so necessary.

The management is in the capable hands of Mr. Harry Johnson, and the latest apparatus for talking films is installed. An orchestra plays for the variety artistes, and silent pictures, and is under the direction of Mr. Michael Rubinstein, who is a fine solo violinist as well as a capable conductor.

"LEAVE IT TO ME"

Dorothy Seacombe, star of "Leave It To Me."

DOROTHY SEACOMBE, Robert Irvine and A. Bromley Davenport are featured in this British crook comedy-drama.

Robert Irvine, who played in "Young Woodley," takes the part in this new film of an ultra-modern young man who has plenty of money to burn. A business man points out the folly of his laziness and he makes up his mind to obtain £5,000 within a few hours to save a fellow club member from ruin.

He not only finds the money but secures a partnership in a business, unmasks a blackmailer, prevents a robbery, and obtains a wife.

MARILYN MILLER LOVES LAUGHTER

HALF the troubles of motion picture producers come from the ambitions of feminine stars to do things that they are really not qualified to do. We hear cases of actresses who fit the bill perfectly in dramatic rôles but crave to appear in comedy parts, and queens of comedy aching to become Juliets.

Marilyn Miller, if we are to believe her own statement about the matter, does not belong to this category. Miss Miller, famous as the Ziegfeld Belle of New York and of equal popularity as the star of the successful pictures "Sally" and "Sunny," openly declares that she does not consider herself a great emotional actress.

"I have never had any ambition to appear in rôles that demand of me plenty of emotion; but really, I venture to think I know best. As a singer and dancer as well as a comedienne, I must have music and the spoken word. That is to say, the same advantages that the stage offers. I do not pretend to be a Sarah Bernhardt, neither would I wish to be. Give me laughter.

"When we made 'Sally' and later on 'Sunny' I realised with a shock what terrific advantages the sound screen boasts over the legitimate stage. Do not think me a vain and swelled headed huzzy when I say that once I could please thousands, now I can please millions. At least I suppose I please them. My company tells me I do.

"In New York I appeared for three years on the stage in 'Sunny,' and therefore suppose I was something of a success. People ask me what is my secret of happiness, and how it is that I can constantly seem cheerful. Of course, I am not really more cheerful than most people, but I am sure that the best answer is that I am constantly attempting to make others happy."

"TOL'ABLE DAVID" ON THE SCREEN

"TOL'ABLE DAVID," Joseph Hergesheimer's famous story, has been made into an all-talking film. In 1921 it won the Gold Medal as the finest silent photoplay of its year.

The popularity of "Tol'able David"—read by millions of readers and to be seen by many more millions of picturegoers, demanded that great care should be exercised in choosing the cast. 172 tests were taken of "posibilities" for the title rôle. The actor had to possess a certain combination of characteristics portrayed by Hergesheimer. As a result, Richard Cromwell, an unknown handsome youngster possessing the essential charm and naivete, was chosen for the part. Experts consider him a "find."

The scenes of "Tol'able David," were taken in the original venue, a fully equipped sound stage being erected in the heart of the woods. In the cast are such well-known players as Noah Beery, Henry B. Walthall, Joan Peers, Edmund Breese, George Duryea, Helen Ware and Harlan E. Knight.

"CANNED" MOONLIGHT

CANNED moonlight is the latest discovery of motion pictures and is to be seen in "Our Modern Maidens," a drama of ultra-modern youth. Desirous of obtaining soft moonlight touches in a highly romantic scene between Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Crawford, the stars, it was found that by careful lighting with incandescent lights, on silver painted leaves and other shrubbery used as a background, the effect could be obtained where real moonlight failed to photograph. Seven gallons of this silver compound was sprayed by air-guns on the grass and other foliage.

"Our Modern Maidens" is described as an epic of the era of jazz-mad youth. An extraordinary cast, typical of youth, handle the various rôles.

Joan Crawford has the starring rôle. Others are Rod la Rocque, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Anita Page, Josephine Dunn, Albert Gran and Edward Nugent.

"GREEK STREET"

THIS British film, which deals with the Italian quarter of London and has some attractive night club scenes, is worth seeing.

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of the film is the remarkable acting and attractive appearance of William Freshman, who has the rôle of a young Italian. He will go far.

Sari Maritza is not so convincing as the heroine and her performance in the cabaret should have been better. She has undoubted good looks but needs more vivacity to please discriminating audiences.

M. D.

At close quarters in "Greek Street."

VERY PAINFUL

WILLIAM HAINES spent a great deal of time walking, following his return from a location trip to New Mexico where he filmed his latest comedy romance, "Way Out West."

A solicitous friend who noticed that the comedian was taking an unusual amount of exercise, asked him why he didn't sit down and take it easy for a while.

"I can't," Haines confided. "Every time I sat down during the filming of 'Way Out West' it was either on the back of a bucking broncho or on a cactus, so I guess I'll have to stand for the next few weeks!"

Haines plays the part of a carnival sharpster turned cowboy in his new comedy.

"PARDON MY GUN"

A tense moment in "Pardon My Gun."

AMONG the special features in the new Western film, "Pardon My Gun," are a rodeo with many thrills, ending in an exciting horse race, and a complete cowboy cabaret show with Abe Lyman's band.

Although most of the action takes place in the open-air, the producer has given us something novel in Western pictures by introducing a well-known band at a merry barn dance.

Sally Starr and Lee Moran are two popular stars in the cast. The story, which is chiefly concerned with the rescue of the hero from the clutches of bandits by the sister of the girl he loves, is by no means original but provides ample opportunity for remarkable displays of horsemanship as well as lively entertainment in the cabaret scenes.

"Stompie," the coloured comedian, and Lee Moran provide the humorous element in this latest type of cowboy films.

"SARAH AND SON"

THIS dramatic film features Ruth Chatterton as the poverty-stricken young singer who is abandoned by her husband and separated from the baby son she adores. After years of effort she becomes a famous opera star and learning that the boy has been adopted by the Ashemores, a wealthy couple, she endeavours to regain possession of him. Not wishing to give up the child, the Ashemores give Sarah instead the deaf and dumb son of their servant, hoping she will be deceived.

Puzzled and distressed by the child's affliction Sarah, aided by a young lawyer who loves her, continues her fight for her own child and there is a dramatic climax when, after having met, mother and child are nearly drowned in the boating accident. When the boy recovers consciousness he calls for his mother. Mrs. Ashemore and Sarah, united in their anxiety, both go to the child, but it is to Sarah that he turns, proving beyond all doubt his true parentage.

The film has been ably directed by a woman, Dorothy Arzner, and since Ruth Chatterton plays the principal part and the theme is one of mother love the production may well be described as a feminine triumph.

PRIZE-WINNING CRITICISM

Seen during week commencing 19th January, 1931, at the Palladium, Brixton, S.W.9, by Mr. Edward Nash, 23, Sheringham Road, Anerley S.E. 26, and awarded the prize for the best film criticism submitted. See page 3 for particulars of competition.

"ROAD TO PARADISE"

THIS must be one of the most extraordinary "mixed" films that has been released. We have the charm and cleverness of Loretta Young to compensate for the very hollow plot, and perhaps only the touch of youthful genius which this player brings to her double part carries the film to what may be called "success." As the unwilling accomplice of two crooks, she literally "walks" into her own sister's home, and—detectives disturbing the robbery—she impersonates for a time her sister, a wealthy woman in a mansion which apparently contains only two servants. The denouement is fairly obvious, and the happy ending scarcely atones for the very far-fetched story we are asked to digest. But—and this is perhaps all-important—it is a delight to watch and to hear Loretta Young, who seems to be on the way to very big things.
